French Drive Germans Back Across Somme; Roosevelt Warns War Imperils Whole World

Senators Oppose Granting Right To Muster Guard

President's Request Sharply Criticized By Vandenberg, Wheeler, LaFollette

(The President's Text, Page 7.)

Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt, warning of the possibility of a "world-wide war," asked Congress yesterday for more than a billion dollars additional for national defense and authority, in case of need, to mobilize the National Guard and reserves.

There was virtually unanimous agreement among the legislators that the new funds will be voted quickly, but sharp dissent in some quarters to the other recommendation of his defense message.

The request for authority to call out the National Guard and reserves split party lines on Capitol Hill. House Minority Leader Martin, of Massachusetts and Representative Maas (Republican), of Minnesota, indorsed the proposal as a means of increasing the efficiency of the "second line of defense."

Others, however, including Senators Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana; Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, and La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, opposed it as "mobilization authority."

Woodring's Statement

Secretary of War Woodring, taking note of the opposition, issued a statement declaring the War Department had no present intention of calling the guard into active service and is attempting to "avoid such a necessity." A more serious emergency, however, may require such a move for seasoning and training troops, he added.

The "almost incredible events of the past two weeks in the European conflict," particularly as the result of the use of planes and mechanized equipment, Mr. Roosevelt told Congress, require a further expansion of our military program.

"No individual, no group can clearly foretell the future," he stated. "As long, however, as a possibility exists that not one continent or two continents but all continents may become involved in a world-wide war, reasonable precaution demands that American defense be made more certain."

Agree on Navy Bill

Other defense developments of the day included:

Senate and House conferees on the $1,423,800,000 Naval appropriation bill reached an agreement on disputed provisions and prepared to report it back for final vote on Tuesday. Members said they had raised the total by approximately $6,000,000 to provide full funds for increasing the Navy enlisted strength to 170,000 and to restore the full amount proposed by the House for expanding the Naval research laboratory here.

The Navy cancelled a scheduled cruise of three battleships with midshipmen aboard to Rio de Janeiro, but said the squadron

'Full Emergency' Would Give Broad Power to President

BROAD EMERGENCY power for the President to force Government orders on defense industries in case the present spirit of cooperation with his defense commission does not last, is being held in reserve, high officials disclosed yesterday. They cited a law of June 3, 1916, giving the President power, "in time of war or when war is imminent," to do the following:

PLACE orders for any commodity with any firm.

FORCE compliance with the orders.

FORCE priority position for Government orders.

TAKE possession of any plants that refuse to comply.

PENALIZE convicted violators with not more than three years in jail and a fine of not more than $50,000.

REGULATE prices to be paid for Government orders, which might be, in effect, Government price-fixing.

A PROCLAMATION of full emergency by the President would be necessary to bring these powers into force, lawyers said. Last September the President proclaimed a "limited emergency."

Senate Passes Bill to Shift Alien Control

Norris and Wheeler Denounce Transfer To Justice Department

By Hedley Donovan

The Senate yesterday approved by a vote of 55 to 4 President Roosevelt's plan for transferring the Immigration Service from the Labor Department to the Justice Department.

Indorsement of the latest reorganization order, designed to "deal quickly" with possible "fifth-column" activity by aliens, came after five hours of protest by Senators Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, and Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana.

The two Westerners contended that the transfer opens the way for "harsh measures" against all foreign-born in this country and might eventually jeopardize the liberties of native Americans. Joining in the negative vote were Senators Murray (Democrat), of Montana, and Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota.

Under a special provision of the resolution the transfer becomes effective 10 days after approval by both branches of Congress.

The House already has approved removal of the Immigration Service to the Justice Department, but must act on a Senate amendment to the reorganization resolution. The amendment sets June 30 as the date for transfer of the Civil Aeronautics Authority and Weather Bureau to the Commerce Department.

Norris held the floor four hours

Conferees Cut District Budget By $600,000

Donovan Says Bill Makes Hike in Realty Tax Unnecessary

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

Senate and House conferees agreed yesterday on a 1941 District supply bill totaling more than $49,000,000 after eliminating an estimated $600,000 of the Senate increases.

Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor, said that the appropriations measure presented a balanced budget, with the anticipation of October income tax collections, and obviates the necessity of increasing the real estate and personal property tax of $1.75 when the new fiscal year begins July 1.

Among the major revisions agreed upon were the following:

Fifteen additional police were allowed instead of the 25 provided by the Senate.

The food stamp plan was discarded upon insistence of the House but funds were included

Uruguay Uncovers Nazi Party; U. S. Cruiser Speeds South

Navy Dispatches 10,000-Ton Quincy To Rio de Janeiro

By Frank L. Kluckhohn
Copyright by New York Times

The 10,000-ton cruiser Quincy, carrying two airplanes, was rushing last night toward South America on what was briefly announced by the Navy to be a "good-will" cruise, but on what was reliably reported to be the special mission of aiding several Latin-American countries, if necessary, in meeting Nazi fifth column activities.

The Quincy's first stop will be Rio de Janeiro, but it was believed that the cruiser might proceed on to Montevideo, where Uruguayan officials are frankly alarmed over organized Nazi activities.

The projected cruise to Rio de Janeiro of three battleships, New York, Texas and Arkansas, was canceled coincidentally. While no official reason for the cancellation was given, it was believed possible that the Quincy was better suited to the needs of the situation since she is one of the Navy's latest ships and extremely fast. Moreover, the battleships planned to carry midshipmen on a cruise, and the middies are not usually taken to areas where action may develop.

It was reported on Wednesday from Montevideo that diplomatic circles in Uruguay felt that Uruguay feared there might be a Nazi fifth column invasion from southern Brazil. Official circles denied this and that Uruguay had requested assistance.

It was recalled yesterday, nevertheless, that during the World War, when Uruguay feared a similar invasion by Germans in Brazil, she asked Argentina for help and was assured that it would be forthcoming.

In official circles, it was said that President Roosevelt himself consulted with State and Navy Department officials before the vessel was dispatched post-haste on this mission.

Montevideo Raids Reveal Penetration By Organized Branch

By John W. White.

Montevideo, Uruguay, May 31.—Uruguayan investigation of Fifth Column activities is disclosing almost unbelieveable Nazi political penetration into South America.

Conclusive evidence has been accumulated by police raids and other investigation methods showing that the Nazi party has established a perfectly organized branch of the party in Uruguay known as the Uruguayan District Group of the German Nationalist Socialist Party. It is under the leadership of a "Little Fuehrer" and acknowledges dependence on and allegiance to the Nazi Party in Germany.

Diplomatic and other observers consider the Uruguayan government's investigation of the utmost historical importance because it is uncovering details of Nazi methods throughout Latin and South America. Argentina's investigation last year showed that Germans there had organized as the Argentine District Group Party.

90,000 Men Land in Britain From Flanders

Many More on Way; 'For God's Sake, Give Us Planes,' They Say

By the Associated Press

London, May 31.—England echoed tonight the cry of her returned Tommies:

"For God's sake give us more airplanes."

The plea rang through a day which saw 90,000 Allied soldiers snatched safely from the Flanders trap, and all Britain heartened by the assurance she had escaped total disaster in the Channel horror.

Although officialdom pronounced the work of the Royal Air Force in Flanders "magnificent," the tributes gave additional weight to the clamor for more and better planes of all types.

"When we duck a Nazi bomb," exclaimed an infantryman, "we want to see a British plane chase the bomber."

[The United Press reported that Britain's newly launched "secret" air weapon, a squadron of Boulton

The War Today

APPARENTLY A PRELUDE to large-scale action on a new front, French troops drove the Germans across the Somme and gained command of the south bank in the Abbeville sector, Paris reported. The action was led by French tanks and supported by a new British Expeditionary Force.

AS THIS ACTION in the south got underway, the Allied evacuation of Flanders, through Dunkerque, continued. Britain claimed 90,000 Allied soldiers were landed safely in England during the day.

BERLIN HAILED the Flanders campaign as about ended and began speculating on the next theater. One belief was that it would be a drive toward Paris and the remaining French Channel ports, with French attention divided by an attack by Italy in the south.

WALTER LIPPMANN FINDS these fast moving events bringing the informed in Washington to the realization that America will be forced soon to make a momentous decision. (Page 7).

Reich Counts Gains

By Lynn Heingerling

Berlin, May 21.—The bloody triumph in Flanders was hailed in Germany tonight as an overpowering blow against British and French morale, and a jubilant populace speculated on where Hitler would strike next.

The only official hint of the next order was the high command's announcement that the bulk of the Nazis in Flanders "now are released for new tasks."

[The United Press Berlin correspondent declared that military quarters said the Germans, within two days, will be free to surge "over open roads" to Paris and London.

[The same dispatch quoted "an inspired official statement" as follows: "The German armed forces are waiting for the orders for the decisive blow. Nobody knows when it will come but one can be assured it will put in the shade all previous ideas of military striking power."]

Claim Destroyer Sunk

The Flanders cleanup, in the Nazi view, entailed only counting the prisoners and evaluation of booty—plus the harrying of the escaping Allies with land guns, bombers and the quick-striking mosquito fleet in the Channel.

During the day the Germans claimed one enemy destroyer was sunk off the Belgian coast by a torpedo boat, which represents the Nazi version of a blitzkrieg-gone-to-sea.

In the German capital, the question on every tongue was where the next blow might fall; whether it would be directed deeper into France in the wake of a new propaganda campaign with obviously Italian implications or against England, the original long-range objective of the German war aims.

Bound up in the question of future activity was the course of Axis Partner Italy.

It was implied that the answer to Italy's part might come from a conference to which Hitler hastily summoned Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels a. Western Front headquarters, and from which a "sensational announcement" by Hitler was expected.

Also Hitler received Italy's new Ambassador, Dino Alfieri, today at his headquarters near the Western Front. Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop was present at the Paris, May 31.—French tanks, supporting a second British expeditionary force being formed in France, pounded at the Germans along the Somme front tonight.

They mopped up the Abbeville sector and reported they had regained unbroken command south of the Somme.

While this campaign went on, heavy detachments of Allied troops were declared to be pouring through Dunkerque in the Channel retreat from Flanders.

The action to the south was mentioned by the French command's night communique only as "a certain activity," and with the secrecy that customarily surrounds the start of major Allied movements.

Many Prisoners Taken

The Abbeville bridgehead was taken, but the capture of the town itself—lying to the north of the river—was not claimed. It remained in No-Man's Land. Hundreds of Nazi prisoners and a mass of German war material were declared seized.

French air activity was greatly intensified on both fronts.

In the north, where the rearguard of the men of Flanders was struggling to force a passage through the Germans—who sought to cut them off in the mountains southeast of Dunkerque—French bombers defied antiaircraft fire and low visibility to drop food and munitions for the isolated forces.

More than 20 tons of bombs were launched by two flights of French bombers in heavy attacks on German concentrations north of the Somme and German antiaircraft batteries and other objectives near Abbeville.

Tanks Lead Assault

The tanks which led the Allied attack in the Abbeville sector were mostly medium-weights of 23 tons.

They were reported to have ridden rough-shod over the German antitank nests and to have broken up the last of the Reichswehr's outposts on the south side of the river.

In earlier offensive actions during the last few days on the Somme other German bridgeheads had been wiped out, mainly in the Amiens sector east of Abbeville.

This apparent prelude to large-scale action on a new front—a front protecting Paris—was reported by the war ministry spokesman along with a declaration that the flood

Rome, May 31.—Events seem to be approaching the grand and terrible climax for Italy.

For the first time since the tension started here it feels like a question of days rather than weeks and one sign of it is that Premier Mussolini would not accept in person a message which United States Ambassador Phillips tried yesterday to deliver to him on behalf of President Roosevelt.

[The Associated Press reported from Rome as an indication Italy was about to strike, an editorial to be published tomorrow in the leading Italian foreign affairs journal Relagione Internationale, which will say: "France and Britain have rejected the demands of the Italian people; these demands will be enforced by arms . . . The Italian people will fight the French and British enemy with extreme determination to complete victory."

Action Termed 'Treason'

Congress Urged to Outlaw Strikes in Defense Program

A call for legislation outlawing strikes at plants producing defense equipment was issued in Congress yesterday as Government officials sought to end speedily the C. I. O. union walkout at Kearny, N. J., tying up work on six new warships.

Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, declared in the House that such strikes in time of stress "are, in fact, treason." Representative Barden (Democrat), of North Carolina, voiced "alarm" at the situation, and prohibitory legislation was offered by Representative Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan.

The legislation would require workers on national defense equipment to sign no-strike contracts for the duration of their employment, and provide prison terms and fines for violation. Hoffman declared the country could not prepare against invasion "if the C. I. O. is permitted to hold up production of warships."

Senator Wiley (Republican), of Wisconsin, declared in the Senate that the Kearny strike "confronts the country with the question as to whether men working on the national defense program are going

Over Our Shoulder

a pre-view of the Sunday Post

'I FOUND NO PEACE'

THAT book title is brought forcibly to mind by a tour through The Post Building this week-end. It's somewhat disconcerting to discover every typewriter, every news ticker, even the presses all throbbing in military cadence—as if a giant loudspeaker were continually blaring forth The Washington Post March.

News section, Hollywood article, editorial section, book page, even society, all have their sights set on the war this Sunday.

As follows:

THOMAS MANN. The self-exile who is to Germany what Goethe was once, will be 65 next week. Agnes E. Meyer reviews Thomas Mann's new book and comments on the meaning of this famous German's life—a complete and happy contrast to the sinister aspects of Teutonism which now occupy the world spotlight—on the book page in Sunday's Post.

CONSCRIPTION FOR U. S? The Gallup Poll tomorrow is in four parts, giving the American voters' opinions on these four vital questions:

1. If Germany wins, do you think the Nazis will eventually attack the United States?

2. Does our present defense safeguard us against attack?

3. Should every able-bodied young man 20 years old serve a year in the Army or Navy?

4. Should the CCC be given military training?

DEFENSE. And as the public votes its opinion of our defenses, The Sunday Post offers a number of expert articles on phases of defense. These include the story of the new Defense Board (Knudsen, Stettinius, etc.), what the G-Men are doing about the Fifth Column, our defense against air attack, and other aspects of our defense problem. Perhaps you'll feel better after you read them.

BATTLES. At Jena the Germans had Napoleon cornered; he turned and routed them. Now a similar battle is being fought on the same bloody ground. Or is it similar? W. W. Chaplin, the I. N. S. war correspondent, reviews Jena for you in Sunday's Post.

SECRET WEAPONS. Tanks and gas were the secret, unexpected weapons of the last war. But every war has produced a new method of destruction. Robert Kleiman gives you the history of secret weapons, from war to war, including the present one.

AWVS. Should the worst come to pass, the ladies will be prepared to do their part. On Sunday's club page Jessie Arndt tells about the newly formed American Women's Voluntary Service for Mutual Aid and Protection.

OAO. Even society is concerned with naval affairs this Sunday—with a full page of pictures and text on June Week at Annapolis. OAO, incidentally, stands for "one and only"—the midshipman's girl. You'll see her at Annapolis—and pictured in the Sunday Post.

HOLLYWOOD. With its export trade shattered, Hollywood no longer feels it necessary to pull its punches for fear of offending politically. Read Lucie Neville's revealing article on the new pictures coming out of the movie capital.

REYNAUD. The lone wolf of France is now the leader of her defense in her most critical hour. Pertinax, famous French journalist, brings Sunday Post readers the story of the new wartime Premier.

House Ways and Means Members Favor Additional Billion in Defense Taxes

Chairman Doughton Frowns on Proposal; Morgenthau Testifies

By John B. Oakes

With the $656,000,000 national defense tax bill assured of speedy consideration in the House, a flurry of Congressional criticism broke about the measure yesterday on grounds unheard of in an election year—that the bill does not go far enough.

The House Ways and Means Committee heard Secretary Morgenthau urge passage of the measure, which would authorize issuance of $3,000,000,000 of National defense securities above the present debt limit, and raise taxes sufficiently to pay for the increase in five years. Both steps, the Secretary said, "are essential."

Later at an executive session in the afternoon, however, the committee spent considerable time discussing a proposal to provide for an extra $1,000,000,000 in national defense taxes over the fivee-year period, bringing the total to $4,000,000,000. Some members felt that this increase was made advisable by President Roosevelt's emergency message to Congress yesterday asking an additional $1,000,000,000 for land and sea armaments.

Byrd Offers Economy Bill

As an economy move seeking to offset the skyrocketing appropriations, Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, yesterday introduced his proposal for a horizontal 10 per cent cut in all Federal expenditures except for national defense and fixed charges. The slash would embrace all Federal salaries—including Congressmen's.

Asserting that the effect of the Byrd amendment "is to bring about a universal wage cut of 10 per cent in the Government," Joseph Baker, president of the United Federal Workers of America (C. I. O.), described it as "a body blow at the spirit of cooperation now so necessary."

Senator Byrd intends to offer his proposal as an amendment to the 1941 relief appropriation bill, which probably will come up in the Senate next week.

Chairman Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee commented yesterday that he saw "no likelihood" of legislation to obtain another $1,000,000,000 in taxes unless word to that effect comes from the Administration. But other members of the committee, which will resume its public hearings Monday, indicated they would fight for more taxes.

According to the present understanding, the committee's open hearings will come to an end Tuesday at 1 p. m., and it was thought likely that the bill might be reported to the House by the end of next week.

Some Senators for Revision

Meanwhile, several members of the Senate Finance Committee, which will handle the measure when it comes over from the House, said they thought the entire tax structure should be revised, but that the probability was that the Administration bill would be approved more or less as is.

Strong sentiment appeared either for an all-summer session of Congress to work out thorough tax revision or for appointment of a joint Congressional committee to draft a bill for presentation to Congress next fall.

Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, asserted that only $200,000,000 could possibly be raised under the new tax program between July 1 and January, when the next Congress convenes. (The $656,000,000 is the estimated annual yield for the full fiscal year, but a Treasury aide said yesterday that the return for the first of the five years would be only $525,000,000.)

La Follette said, "It only makes worse the inequities of the present tax structure." He urged immediate drafting of an entirely new tax law, including a broadening of the tax base.

Others, including Senators George (Democrat), of Georgia; King (Democrat), of Utah, and Lodge (Republican), of Massachusetts, likewise indicated preference for a larger tax yield.

At the House hearing, Secretary Morgenthau said he had agreed on the $3,000,000,000 with Doughton and Chairman Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, and would stand by that sum unless they asked for a change.

New Legislation Urged

He told the committee that unless new legislation were enacted, the Treasury's borrowing power would be "completely exhausted" by the end of February, and the Treasury's working balance "dangerously depleted."

He said that maintenance of a balance approximately the same as at present — $1,300,000,000 — "is especially to be desired in the troubled world of today." The 1941 deficit—originally estimated in January at $1,716,000,000—would be $3,703,000,000 because of unanticipated expenditures, he said.

In reply to a question about possible use of the $19,000,000,000 in gold stored at Fort Knox, Ky., to finance the defense program, Undersecretary of the Treasury Daniel Bell said that nearly all of it is "in use" in the stabilization fund, general fund, as reserve for United States notes or as backing for gold certificates.

To a suggestion that some of the stabilization fund might be used replied:

for defense purposes, Morgenthau "This is a nestegg that belongs to the people of the United States that should be preserved for some great emergency which we in the Treasury do not now foresee."

1-to-10,000-Tagged Cars Inspected

Maj. Ernest W. Brown ordered police yesterday "to take the proper action" against vehicles bearing license plates from 1 to 10,000 that do not display a 1940 inspection sticker.

Extension in time was granted some motorists, Brown's memorandum stated.

Day's Receipts Of Red Cross Total $14,311

Mary St. John and Mary Ann Kruetz present to Mrs. J. B. Morrison the contribution made to the Red Cross War Relief Fund by Girl Scout Troop 62

A more hopeful atmosphere yesterday pervaded the District chapter house of the American Red Cross, where more than 2,000 volunteer workers are centering their activity in behalf of war victims abroad.

For one reason, there was the receipt of $14,311.68, bringing the total collected to date in the District for war relief to $72,867.68. The goal is $300,000.

Most heartening than the increase in figures, however, was the show of spirit displayed by a five-year-old girl and a middle-aged colored woman who trod their separate paths to the chapter house door to deposit 39 pennies ann $5, respectively.

"These pennies were in my candy bank," little Bernice Wilson, of 417 North Thomas street, Arlington, Va., told a volunteer as she handed over a bag filled with 39 copper portraits of Abraham Lincoln. "But I've changed my mind. Please send them to the little children of Holland."

Bernice is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allen M. Wilson.

She Can Afford This

Another who called personally to donate her bit was the colored woman, who asked that her name be withheld because:

"If people read that I gave $5 they'll think I can afford to make other gifts, too. I can't afford this $5, but I just had to do something for those poor war sufferers."

Among the largest single gifts reported yesterday by the District Red Cross chapter were the following: Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., $1,500; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Warren and Mrs. Mary E. Stewart, $1,000 each; an anonymous gift of the same amount; George Theunis and Mrs. William Lawrence Breese, $500 each.

Meantime, American Red Cross headquarters announced that receipts to date in the national drive for $20,000,000 total more than $4,700,000.

Locally, today is expected to be the biggest collection day since the campaign was launched, with the bulk of yesterday's pay day subscriptions by Government workers scheduled to be turned in.

Open for Donations

Ordinarily the District chapter house is closed at 1 p. m. on Saturdays, but will remain open this afternoon to accommodate bearers of Government donations, as well as the hundreds of volunteers who are making surgical dressings, sewing baby garments and knitting sweaters in the building's auditorium.

Yesterday 14,200 surgical dressings were shipped to New York en route to France. A portion of the war relief funds being raised will be devoted to the purchase of gauze, yarn, flannel and other materials. All sewing, knitting and other manual services are performed free by volunteers.

The District Chapter yesterday renewed its call to Washington women to apply for yarn with which to knit sweaters, sox and wristlets.

would visit ports in Venezuela and the Caribbean as scheduled. The cruiser Quincy is now en route on a "good-will" trip to Rio and other South American ports, it was later announced.

The Army announced the forthcoming organization of another new infantry division at Fort Benning, Ga., which will raise the number of such units to six. Brig. Gen. Walter E. Prosser will command the unit, which will be known as the fourth division, it was said.

The House Ways and Means Committee considered boosting the Administration 10 per cent tax increase bill tc provide additional funds required under the further enlargement of the defense program.

President Roosevelt asked Congress to authorize any of the executive departments and agencies to employ "persons of outstanding experience and ability" as "dollar a year men" in connection with the defense program.

The Senate approved 55 to 4 a Presidential reorganization order transferring the Immigration Service from the Labor to the Justice Department, to afford closer supervision of possible "fifth column" activity among aliens.

Attorney General Jackson was directed to contact Governors of States who set up special national defense commissions so that such movements can be coordinated with Federal defense efforts.

Ford, Morgenthau Confer

Edsel Ford, president of the Ford Motor Co., conferred with Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and his aircraft adviser, Dr. George Jackson Mead, on a "national defense problem." None of the three, however, would say whether they discussed possible Ford production of plane motors.

Such an arms and training program as he described, the President's message said, will require "large" amounts—more than "a billion dollars." Representatives of the Government departments concerned will present the detailed plans to Congressional committees, Mr. Roosevelt stated.

Naval officials, it was learned, plan to put a list of items totaling over $600,000,000 before Congress and indicate the priorities they desire. Funds for planes, antiaircraft guns and protection, and ammunition is said to make up a large part of the total. The Army estimate is more than $700,000,000, while $250,000,000 is said to be included for youth training.

Congress would vote such parts of these proposals as they consider urgently necessary, the President's plan contemplates.

Concluding his message, Mr. Roosevelt said he would like Congress before adjournment to grant him the authority to call into active service "such portion of the National Guard as may be deemed necessary to maintain our position of neutrality and to safeguard the national defense." This authority should also extend to the reserves, he added.

Under the present law the guard and reserves cannot be called into service without their consent for more than two weeks training a year, unless Congress declares a national emergency to exist or the Nation is in danger of invasion or rebellion.

Senator Vandenberg declared this proposal was "shocking" and added that if "we are that close to an emergency" Congress had better stay in session and "exercise its constitutional function with respect to mobilization."

Senator Wheeler likewise declared himself opposed to giving the President power "to mobilize."

Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, said he was "amazed" at the request and added that the "war-making powers in this country, even for defense, rest with Congress and I intend to do everything I can to see that they remain there."

"We cannot accomplish a defense program in this country if we are to have an excited leadership in the White House," he added. "We must go about it calmly, deliberately and determinedly."

Two of the three elementary schools proposed by the Senate were accepted by the House.

Compromises were reached on the Senate increases for public health nurses and Gallinger Hospital.

Scott Circle underpass authorization was retained.

The House agreed to keep the recreational system as it is, rather than to transfer it to the schools.

Education of handicapped children was restored to welfare department and appropriation cut from $22,400 allowed by Senate to $15,000.

Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, in explaining why the Senate conferees gave in to almost half of the $1,406,173 increases to the House appropriations, said that he had gone as far as Auditor Donovan advised it is possible without putting the District in the red.

While the exact total of the supply bill will not be known until committee clerks can do some calculating today, Maj. Donovan estimated that about $600,000 of the Senate increases had been lopped off in conference. If this figure is sustained, the 1941 bill will total approximately $49,097,000, or about $1,000,000 above current appropriations.

The measure would fall approximately $800,000 under the Budget Bureau estimates.

Dropping of the food stamp plan came as a surprise. District Commissioners had recommended the appropriation upon recommendation of Public Welfare Director Robert E. Bondy, who had made necessary arrangements with the Surplus Commodities Corporation.

Abbott School Project Put Off

Although the District would have advanced $150,000 to put the stamp plan into operation, actually it would have cost the city only $3,100 to administer it and the $150,000 would have been repaid.

The Abbott Vocational School and Wilson Teachers College projects, under discussion several years, were postponed another year because the House had specified the Thirteenth and Upshur streets site for the Abbott School, while the Senate had specified Brentwood Park.

The elementary school projects agreed to by the House are purchase of sites and plans for (1) a school to replace the Cranch, Tyler and Van Ness schools, and (2) a building to replace the Brent, Dent, Lenox and French schools.

The conferees agreed to a new assistant principal at the Woodrow Wilson High School, but eliminated an appropriation for two additional vocational guidance teachers.

In returning the education of handicapped children to the Welfare Department, the conferees went against the recommendations of the Welfare Department and the Board of Education.

Gallinger Appropriation Cut

The health department suffered badly in the agreement, losing seven of the nine additional nurses allowed by the Senate. However, it retained one part-time physician and two of three clerks voted by the Senate for the tuberculosis clinic, and one of two part-time dentists provided by the Senate for the Southwest Health Center. The Senate addition of $250 for medical supplies at the Southwest Health Center was retained.

Gallinger Hospital, which had been given an increase of $38,160 for additional personnel and reallocation of salaries was cut to an increase of $12,840.

The Senate and House conferees split the increase of $400 a year which the Senate allowed the dog catcher and eliminated funds for a radio-equipped truck.

Senate increases for the assessor's office, the tax collector's office, the auditor's office, the surveyor's office, and the corporation counsel were accepted by the House. A $5,000 appropriation for stocking the new Southwest branch library was dropped.

As was expected, the House conferees dropped the prohibition against the further free education of nonresident pupils. Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, was vigorously opposed to the ban.

Retained was the Capper amendment to provide $350 for lectures in the schools on the evils of alcoholism and drugs.

Fire Chief Gets Auto

The fire department gets a $7,000 new pumping engine and the fire chief a new auto.

New elevators for the Southwest Health Center and the crippled children's ward at Gallinger Hospital were agreed to by House aides. House members also accepted the Senate's $3,675 for the preparation of plans for a new Children's Receiving Home, while the Senators agreed to two temporary foster homes for care of nondelinquent children.

The House members won in excluding the walled yard project at the jail, whereas the Senate aides prevailed in keeping $25,000 for a new bakery at Lorton.

The Representatives agreed to the increase in pensions for the needy blind and divided the Senate increase of $15,000 for old-age pensions. Art, music and writers were eliminated from the WPA projects and replaced by vocational training.

Kept in the bill was the Senate provision directing the commissioners to make a study of off-street parking facilities, but another direction to draw up a capital improvements program was eliminated.

Hull Discussed As 3d-Term Running Mate

Supporters Contend Ticket Would Link Right and Left Wings

By Robert C. Albright

President Roosevelt's name yesterday was being seriously linked with Secretary of State Cordell Hull on a third-term slate as the probability of the President's own renomination grew.

Democrats in Hull's State of Tennessee are discussing the combination and in Washington a number of the Secretary's friends and some New Dealers are beginning to pair the famed foreign relations team for the first time.

Speculation turned on the President, who has privately favored Hull as his successor, choosing his top-ranking Cabinet officer as a running mate, to carry with him his national defense and foreign policies into the campaign.

The Secretary of State, some Hull supporters contend, would immeasurably strengthen a Roosevelt ticket and provide Congress with a guiding hand on foreign affairs and the Administration's strongest link between the New Deal left and the conservative right.

Only questions, in the opinion of some observers, are whether the President would prefer to keep Hull at the State Department's helm during troubled times ahead, or whether Hull would be willing to relinquish the most important Cabinet portfolio in exchange for a chair on the Senate's rostrum.

Hull has repeatedly disowned any political ambitions and long since put a stop to any campaign activity by his friends for the first place nomination. Previous to the recent turn in the war, he had never been seriously mentioned for second choice even on a third term ticket.

Popular on Capitol Hill

Popular with Congressmen, with a long House and Senate service record, Hull, in addition to his foreign affairs stewardship, has guided to passage two of the Administration's most delicate pieces of legislation in a year—the amended Neutrality Act and reciprocal trade law extension.

Proponents of a Roosevelt-Hull ticket argue that his State Department duties could be passed on to a man of the type of Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles, an able exponent of the Roosevelt-Hull diplomacy school, and Hull could wield an equally important influence in a crucial period as the Senate's presiding officer.

Open candidates for the Democratic first place nominated, meanwhile, failed yesterday to accept the invitation of Federal Security Administrator McNutt to "withdraw" and declare for the President.

McNutt invited other candidates to follow his lead in declaring that "total preparedness to avert the threat of total war requires that President Roosevelt continue as the Chief Executive." He denied this meant his actual withdrawal from the race, since, if the President declines to run, his name would still go before the convention.

Several Eliminated

Some Democratic Senators interpreted his announcement as a bid for the Vice Presidential nomination under Roosevelt.

Several other first-choice contestants are technically eliminated or profess no second-place ambitions.

Postmaster General Farley, still an unconditional candidate for the nomination, hails, like the President, from New York and cannot run with him.

Senator Wheeler, of Montana, says he wouldn't take the Vice Presidency, and Vice President Garner has reputedly told friends he would return to Uvalde if defeated for the nomination. Senator Byrnes, of North Carolina, asked his State convention not to indorse him for Vice President, as did Federal Loan Administrator Jesse Jones.

Some of these might reconsider if approached by the President (reports are current that some may be).

Senator Wheeler's comment was typical of the Congressional view of McNutt's declaration.

"I don't think Mr. McNutt or anybody else has to worry about the President accepting the nomination," said Wheeler. "Everything that has been done recently has shown very definitely that he will."

Senator Ellison D. (Cotton Ed) Smith, of South Carolina, said he supposed Mr. Roosevelt's nomination was inevitable, but declared his reelection was another thing.

War? Students Say 'No, Tanks'

The first tank since President Roosevelt announced his emergency defense program, was delivered at the White House yesterday—uninvited.

The "war machine" was a crudely fashioned cardboard life-size model of any army tank mounted with a broomstick "gun."

The tank arrived at the White House by express, bearing Cornell University stickers and a tag saying that the tank came from the American Students Union of Cornell University, Utica, N. Y.

On its gray-painted sides was the legend: "Dear President Roosevelt—Keep America Out of War!" It was covered with more than 200 signatures.

Huston Thompson Heads Unit; Mrs. Morrow Urges U. S. Help

Declaring "the future of western civilization is being decided upon the battlefields of Europe," a group of prominent Washingtonians yesterday formed a branch of William Allen White's National Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies.

Even as the organization meeting was being held at the Metropolitan Club, a telegram to Congress from Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow, mother-in-law of isolationist Charles A. Lindbergh, urged adoption of the national committee's three-point program:

1. To make available to the Allies as many planes as in the opinion of the President may be released without impairing national defense.

Refugee Appropriation

2. Make available a Congressional appropriation of $100,000,000 to aid the millions of refugees in the French war zone.

3. Stop the export of all war materials which may find their way to the aggressor nations.

Mrs. Morrow's telegram was placed in the record by Senator Smathers (Democrat), of New Jersey.

Huston Thompson, Washington lawyer and former special Assistant Attorney General, was named to head the local branch of the movement recently started by White, editor of the Emporia (Kans.) Gazette. Members include such notables as Daniel C. Roper, former Secretary of Commerce; Dean Acheson, former Undersecretary of the Treasury; Philip Marshall Brown, educator; Dwight F. Davis, former Governor General of the Philippine Islands, and Dean William Crane Johnstone, of George Washington University Junior College.

To Arouse Public

"The Washington branch of the National Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies," said a declaration unanimously adopted at the meeting, "appeals to all citizens who share their views of the dangers confronting the Nation to join with them in a concentrated effort to arouse public opinion and secure the action by the National Administration and Congress required by this emergency."

The meeting instructed Thompson to appoint a number of committees to aid in raising funds "which will be devoted in the most practical manner available to the American public to bring success to the Allied arms."

Thompson told the meeting "this does not imply sending an expeditionary force to Europe. There are many and decisive reasons against that and the end sought would not be accomplished by it. The Allies do not lack manpower, but they do need supplies and munitions, especially airplanes and tanks. These, the United States must, in its own interest, make every effort to supply in far greater quantities than heretofore."

Other Signers

Others at the meeting who signed the unanimously-adopted declaration were Thomas Morgan, named treasurer of the local branch; Melvin D. Hildreth, named secretary; Roger S. Greene, Clark M. Eichelberger, Edward J. Burling, jr., Robert Woolley, Frederick H. Brook, Frank B. Lord, Mrs. J. Austin Stone, Donald C. Blaisdell, Dr. Danford U. Larkey (Baltimore), Robert Watt, Thomas Morgan, Dr. Esther C. Brunnauer, Livingstone Hartley and Helen Jean Nolan.

Headquarters were established at 714 Evans Building, 1420 New York avenue northwest.

Act to Outlaw Strikes Urged

to be permitted to walk out."

At the same time, John R. Steelman, chief of the labor conciliation service, continued efforts to settle the wage dispute which caused the strike. He revealed that P. W. Chappell, a Federal mediator, had been in conference with the company and union officials for several days before the strike was voted unexpectedly Thursday night.

"We thought that we had at least a temporary adjustment worked out," Steelman said. "We were greatly surprised by the union's vote to strike."

Elsewhere, more progress was made in expansion of the Naval forces.

Arrangements were completed for the launching today of the Nation's first new battleship in 19 years. The 35,000-ton U. S. S. Washington will slide into the waters at the Philadelphia Navy Yard, two months ahead of schedule as a result of the emergency speed-up program.

Two new 1,630-ton destroyers, the Nicholson and the Wilkes were christened yesterday at the Boston Navy Yard.

And the Navy Department opened bids on four new destroyers with two companies submitting proposals that would cut six months from the time now required to build such craft.

Strike Called Complete

Kearny, N. J., May 31 (AP).—A strike labeled "100 per cent complete" by a union spokesman tied up construction today on six United States warships in the yards of the Federal Shipbuilding & Drydock Co. as Federal officials expressed hopes of an early settlement.

William J. Carney, regional director of the C. I. O., said 8,000 workmen joined the walkout, which started last midnight.

John J. Green, national president of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America, announced that at a conference today "the company flatly refused to consider the three salient points in dispute, to wit, a union shop, increase in wages and vacation after one year's service."

Negotiations will continue tomorrow and a meeting of the general union membership was scheduled for Sunday afternoon.

L. H. Korndorff, company president, said he was "astonished" to learn that the union, Local 16, had turned down yesterday an agreement which "was accepted by both sides."

The previous union contract expired Wednesday. Korndorff said the new offer embodied "certain adjustments in wage rates."

John Dempsey, local president, said the men demanded a 10-cent per hour increase on the previous 62½-cent to $1 an hour scale. Dempsey and other leaders urged delay in issuing the strike call.

Navy Secretary Charles Edison at Washington predicted speedy settlement with the declaration "we cannot afford to have trouble of this sort in these times."

A cruiser and two destroyers are under construction on the ways, two destroyers are in the fitting basin and another cruiser is in first stages of construction. Three cargo vessels and two tankers are also affected by the strike.

Dempsey said naval construction was ahead of schedule but Korndorff declared the naval ships "will be delayed in completion unless the sudden strike is quickly ended."

"So far as the statement that the company now receives higher prices for ships than two years ago is concerned," Korndorff added, "it must be pointed out that such a statement does not take into consideration far-reaching changes in design nor does it recognize that all contracts now in the yard have been awarded on a basis of competitive bidding."

District Officials 'Abdicate' To 87 Youngsters for a Day

District officials yesterday turned over their cares and woes to 87 youngsters in observance of the fifth annual Junior District Day.

The youngsters, selected from Washington public and parochial schools, arrived early at the District Building, where they were "sworn in" by Police Court Judge George Neilson. From then on it was "every man for himself." Judge Neilson was immediately "ousted" from his office by Joseph Pauline, of St. Joseph's School.

Murray Williams, of Alice Deal Junior High School, became Commissioner J. Russell Young and Virgilio Velasquez, of Jefferson Junior High School, tackled the engineering problems for Commissioner David McCoach, jr.

The day was climaxed by a 5,000-strong parade before a reviewing stand on Constitution avenue, between Fifteenth and Seventeenth streets northwest.

Two of the more envied lads were Frank Johnson, of Paul Junior High School, who became Fire Chief Stephen T. Porter, and Stanley Dalton, of Powell Junior High, who took the part of Police Chief Brown.

At Boys Club of Washington, Central Branch, a staff of boy members ranging from 11 to 17 took over club officers' positions at 6 p. m. for a program of entertainment.

Spero Pappapotis, 15, of 222 Indiana avenue northwest, assumed the branch managership, with a staff of young officers including the following: James Dinsmore, 14, of 228 F street northwest, athletic director; John Apostolakas, 11, 109 E street northwest, club secretary, and Mike Pappapotis, 13, brother of the branch manager, scoutmaster. They had been named to office by vote of fellow members.

Jobless Army to Aid Defense

Young people not in need and adults on relief are to be enrolled for defense training in connection with the President's doubled program, it was learned yesterday.

The $250,000,000 training program, contained in the President's second emergency defense message yesterday, may finally give instruction to well above 1,000,000 persons a year. The work would be under direction of Sidney Hillman, labor coordinator on the National Defense Commission.

It had been disclosed earlier that 600,000 young men and women already under the Civilian Conservation Corps or the National Youth Administration, would be trained as cooks, mechanics, radio operators, engineers, and in other pursuits useful in war.

Yesterday, after an all-day conference of officials who are mapping the training program, it was learned that some 400,000 adults on the Works Projects Administration rolls and an unspecified number of young people not now receiving Government aid also would be given this training.

Machinery for extending defense training to WPA is simple, it was said. Workers who already have some skill at mechanics and allied defense trades would be taken from the projects where they are now employed and transferred to defense projects. Much of this work would be retraining of older workers whose skills have lapsed through years of unemployment, it was said.

Opening of the training program to young persons who are not in financial distress would also be done by a simple device: suspending the "need clause" in the relief bill which now reserves the CCC and NYA facilities exclusively for low-income youngsters.

There would be no difficulty in finding young people to take the training, officials said.

NYA now has 512,000 in its work program and, a survey has shown, 300,000 more are on the waiting list and 2,100,000 are estimated to be out of work, out of school, in need and potential qualifiers for NYA rolls.

The District NYA office already has reported an influx of youngsters to apply for work under the training program.

The office has been at some pains to explain to the youths that Congress has not yet voted funds for the training and that the program probably will not get under way for at least a month, possibly longer.

Dr. R.R. Moton, Educator Son Of Slave, Dies

Former President Of Tuskegee Institute Passes in Gloucester

By the Associated Press

Gloucester Courthouse, Va., May 31 (AP).—Dr. Robert R. Moton, 72, president emeritus of Tuskegee Institute, died at his home in Gloucester County today, exactly five years from the date of his retirement.

Dr. Moton, born on an Amelia County, Va., plantation, the son of a slave, succeeded Booker T. Washington as president of Tuskegee and became known as one of the most famous Negro educators in America.

As a boy he did chores about the home of a Virginia Presbyterian minister where one of his duties was to brush the clothes and shine the shoes of the minister's son, George. The son afterward also became an educator—Dr. George H. Denny, president of the University of Alabama—while the Negro boy rose to the head of nearby Tuskegee Institute.

Wilson Sent Him Abroad

He enrolled at Hampton Institute, worked his way through school and remained there as commandant of the cadet corps. In all, he spent 25 years as an officer at Hampton.

In December, 1915, he was appointed principal of Tuskegee to succeed Washington. In less than 15 years, he boosted the institute faculty from 190 to 268 and saw the annual budget grow from $298,000 to $580,000. Commercial and junior college courses of two years each were added to the curriculum, new dormitories were erected and other buildings added to the school plant.

He was one of the founders of the Commission on Interracial Cooperation. In 1918 President Wilson sent him to France to make a survey among colored soldiers, and in 1927 Herbert Hoover, as chairman of the President's committee on the Mississippi River flood disaster, appointed him head of the committee of Negro leaders.

Dr. Moton was a natural orator. Among his many addresses was the dedicatory speech at the unveiling of the Lincoln Monument in Washington.

Williams College, of Williamstown, Mass.; Oberlin College, of Ohio, and Lincoln University conferred degrees upon him.

Dr. Buchman Feels Defense May Require Force

San Francisco, May 31 (AP).—Dr. Frank Buchman, founder of the Moral Rearmament Movement, said in an interview today he was not opposed to building 50,000 airplanes for American defense and asserted he was no "peace-at-any-price" man.

He said the accusation that M. R. A. leaders in England had fostered the Chamberlain policy of appeasement was in error.

The M. R. A. leader explained, however, that while outbreak of force may call for forceful means of combatting it, he still believed that divine guidance provided "a superior force" which could solve problems at their roots.

Trust Firms, SEC Agree On New Rules

Accord Clears Way For Congressional Action This Session

By the Associated Press

Agreement between the Securities Commission and a major segment of the investment trust industry cleared the way yesterday for possible Congressional action at this session on regulation of investment trusts and investment companies.

Spokesmen for the industry and SEC officials appeared before a Senate banking subcommittee to present joint recommendations for a regulatory measure which they said they had agreed on in a series of informal conferences after the conclusion of hearings.

They asked the committee to act quickly to make possible early Senate and House consideration.

Cooperation Praised

Chairman Wagner (Democrat), of New York, of the subcommittee, called the joint proposals a "magnificent" example of how "cooperation between Government and industry may achieve reasonable and sound legislation."

The SEC officials said they were still attempting to reach an agreement with minor divisions of the industry on terms of regulation affecting those groups and expected to have the bill in final form in a few days.

The compromise measure was a modified version of an original SEC proposal to which industry witnesses have objected during hearings.

Some of the major provisions of the new bill follow:

All investment trusts and investment companies would be required to register with the Securities Commission, supplying detailed information as to the character of the business, its officers, etc.

Certain practices, such as purchases on margin, short-selling and trading in joint accounts would be prohibited.

Approval of a majority of stockholders would be required before an investment company could change its basic investment policy or borrow money.

Restrictions would be imposed on transactions with affiliated persons, and "self-dealing" would be prohibited.

Companies would be required to inform stockholders when dividends were paid out of funds other than earnings on investments.

Annenberg, U. S. May Settle For 8 Million

Reported Agreement Reached on Claims In Income Tax Cases

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 31.—For a reported $8,000,000, a tentative compromise agreement to settle the financial aspects of all criminal and civil Federal income tax cases against M. L. Annenberg, wealthy Philadelphia publisher, was announced today.

United States District Attorney William J. Campbell declined to disclose the amount involved. From another source at the Federal building, however, the figure was placed at $8,000,000.

Annenberg and 19 other individuals and five companies were named last year in the biggest criminal income tax case on record. Government experts estimated that a lumping of the criminal and civil claims against him as an individual, plus amounts claimed from his manifold corporations, would be around $9,000,000.

Annenberg, whose Nation-wide news race information service, was abandoned last fall after a Government investigation, pleaded guilty to one count of one indictment, and is scheduled to be sentenced on that count June 5. It alleged he evaded taxes of $1,217,296 on his 1936 income.

The status of two indictments alleging violation of the lottery laws and another charging him and others with conspiracy to influence a grand jury witness, remained unchanged under the proposed agreement.

Campbell said the agreement, which was reached at Washington, called for dismissal of ten of Annenberg's associates in criminal income tax cases, including his son, Walter.

Campbell said the agreement required ratification by Annenberg himself and Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau.

Senate Passes Bill to Transfer Control of Aliens

to fight the shift of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, resuming the bitter attacks on the Federal Bureau of Investigation which he made earlier in the present session.

The Nebraskan charged J. Edgar Hoover, FBI director, with direction of the "disgraceful episode" of the antialien raids in 1920. Hoover was then a special assistant to the Attorney General.

As director of the FBI, Hoover has been responsible for serious violations of civil liberties, Norris said. The Senator expressed fears that transfer of the Immigration Service to the Justice Department would put the FBI in a position to threaten all the country's foreign-born with "shameful persecution."

Wheeler said the country must be prepared to deal swiftly with espionage or treachery, but appealed to the Senate "to undertake no harsh measures against aliens in the name of a spy hunt."

Any "mass roundup" of aliens, Wheeler declared, would create "an atmosphere of hysteria, hatred, rank illegalities, the pitting of men against men and group against group, with resulting dissension, and perhaps the ultimate destruction of liberty in the United States."

Senator Wiley (Republican), of Wisconsin, defending the FBI and the Immigration Service transfer, asserted that Hoover "is the one who has made our civil liberties a reality."

Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, said he hoped the Immigration Service "will be placed directly under J. Edgar Hoover." Senator Holman (Republican), of Oregon, added that the service "obviously is not functioning as it should under the present minister of labor."

President Roosevelt's reorganization message said the transfer was "urgent" in view of "the startling sequence of international events." The move is "designed to afford more effective control over aliens," according to the message, but "does not reflect any intention to deprive them of their civil liberties or otherwise to impair their legal status."

Representative Rich (Republican), Pennsylvania, proposed yesterday that United States citizenship be made a prerequisite to "owning, publishing or editing" any periodical, pamphlet, newspaper or other publication.

He introduced legislation to accomplish this by providing deportation, imprisonment and fines for aliens violating the requirement.

Under the bill, editors and publishers of foreign fiction and nonfiction and foreign nonfiction publishing houses outside this country could obtain permission to distribute their publications within the United States by submitting proofs to the Secretary of State.

Chain Asks U.S. Close Radio To Communists

Officials Protest Broadcast, Urge Revision of Law

New York, May 31 (AP).—Protesting an announced broadcast Sunday of the American Communist Party's convention proceedings, officials of a radio chain and a former Congressman today demanded the Government ban Communists from the Nation's radio lanes.

In a public statement, the Columbia Broadcasting System urged revision of the communications law "so that no broadcaster is compelled to give time to the candidates of any political party if it is proven to be subservient to a foreign power."

C. B. S. is one of three national chains scheduling the Sunday broadcast of a speech by Earl Browder, general secretary of the Communist Party who is expected to be nominated for the Presidency.

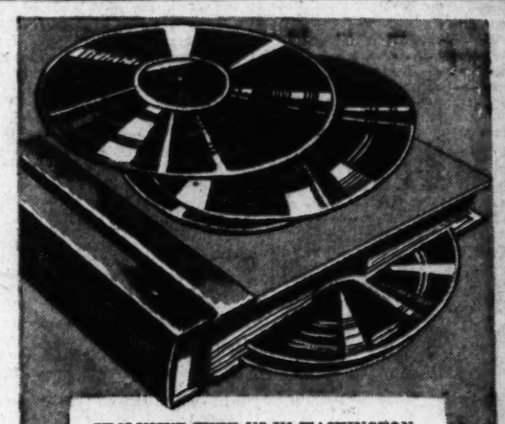

Station WCKY in Cincinnati decided to drop out of the C. B. S. network for the 15 minutes allotted to the Communist program. WCAU at Philadelphia also refused to broadcast the speech.

French Officers and Privates Speak Confidently Of Victory Despite Swift German Advance

Lightning Blows Fail to Shake Them, U. S. Reporter Finds

By P. J. Philip

Copyright by New York Times

With the French Armies in Eastern France, May 31.—Of all that has happened since the German offensive began, nothing has shaken the amazing confidence with which the bulk of the French army regards the future.

Coming again into this district just three weeks from the day when the first intimation of the German attack came in the form of crashing bombs, it has seemed incredible that so much has changed. Then the Maginot Line was an imposing barricade. The French and British armies in the north lay behind what were believed to be strong defenses and the powerful armies of Holland and Belgium with defenses of their own. The only warfare was that of night skirmishing parties.

Now, in three weeks, the German army has conquered Holland and Belgium, and established itself along the seacoast from Denmark to below Boulogne. It has cut off from France her northern coal supplies and the industrial area of Lille and it has driven millions of people from their occupations and farms to shelter.

And yet these French officers and privates of tank and other regiments with whom I have been associating these last 24 hours speak confidently of victory.

Looking back at the confidence there was three weeks ago and all that has happened since, one is inclined to fear that here is another illusion that the same "incredible" faults as Premier Paul Reynaud declared had been responsible for the collapse of the frontier defense may be repeating themselves.

There is, however, it must be quickly added, much more than talk in this new confidence. It is being backed by a new activity, new conceptions and above all a new determination. Also it has still plenty of material although the situation would undoubtedly be much better if it had more, especially airplanes and heavy tanks. Everyone now knows what may be expected and expected with the same lightning suddenness as it came three weeks ago and this time the French feel ready.

Uruguay Uncovers Nazi Party Branch

republics, including Chile, Colombia and Bolivia, have charged that there are similar organizations in their countries. Latin-American diplomats here, therefore, are informing their governments that details of Nazi operations in Uruguay are indicative of what can be expected in all other South and Central American nations.

Operating as annexes to the general party, are district groups of subsidiary organizations, including storm troops and Gestapo, secret police, which have carried Nazi discipline and ideology into every nook and corner of Germany.

There are more than a dozen of these annexes controlling employment, feminist activities, the youth movement and sports. Together, they control every phase of business, social and recreational life of all Germans enrolled in the Nazi Party here.

In addition to whatever dues social organizations, sports clubs and mutual aid associations collect from members of the Nazi Party, there are levies of three income taxes for remittance to Germany. One of these is a tax of 1 per cent on all wages and salaries for the support of the general Nazi Party fund in Germany. Another is for the so-called winter relief fund and a third is for the aid of students in countries Germany has occupied in Europe.

The general tax of 1 per cent begins at 40 centavos per month on wages of 40 pesos and continues at that rate until it reaches 3 pesos a month on salaries of 300 pesos. All incomes above 300 pesos pay 4½ pesos per month.

Even the unemployed and children must signalize their allegiance to the party by paying 20 centavos a month. This tax as well as the other two contributions are deducted from the pay rolls by employers, who are made responsible for their collections.

The most important annex of the organization, ranking immediately after the Nazi Party itself, is the German Labor Front. No German employer may hire clerical help or laborers and no German may accept employment except through registration in this organization, which is known in Uruguay as the "German Labor Front, Uruguayan Group."

Application for membership recognizes Hamburg, not Montevideo, as headquarters.

Many Germans throughout Uruguay have received the dreaded Gestapo anonymous letter threatening dire results if the recipient does not do whatever is wanted of him. These anonymous threats are stamped with the Gestapo's rubber stamp showing the double eagle and the legend—"State Political Police"—in German.

Apparently harmless but highly significant annexes of the Nazi organization are affiliated with sports clubs. They are glider groups and motorcycle groups. In view of the use to which gliders have been put by German parachute troops, and motorcycles by motorized columns, the potentialities of these seem plainly apparent. There are similar glider and motorcycle clubs in Argentina and other South American republics.

Another highly significant discovery by police investigators was a German map maker, holding diplomas and other certificates showing he had studied map making under Nazi party leaders in Germany. The police found in his possession a map of Montevideo showing the city divided into 38 districts.

He also had a map of the Netherlands recently sent from Germany showing gun emplacements had been located to insure bombardment of strategic points which constituted the immediate objectives of the invading troops. Investigation is uncovering further details daily, and it is not expected that the government will decide on the policy to be adopted until the investigation is concluded.

Hands Off Refugee Ship, U. S. Warns

Belligerents Asked Not to Molest S. S. Washington

By the Associated Press

Stern measures to rescue Americans from the Mediterranean area over which war clouds are lowering were adopted by the State Department yesterday.

Officials disclosed that notices had been sent to all the belligerent governments, cautioning them not to molest or delay the S. S. Washington which is now enroute to Bordeaux, France, and Lisbon, Portugal, to bring out Americans gathered there.

The department told the belligerents that the ship was not carrying passengers, cargo or mail to Bordeaux excepting two Red Cross representatives and a shipment of Red Cross medical supplies and clothing. It would proceed without convoy and with the American flag prominently displayed and fully lighted at night, the notices added.

Fear Italy's Entry

Official fears here that Italy might enter the war were evinced in two ways:

1—The department said the S. S. Washington might not proceed on to Genoa, Italy, its regular port of call, if the passenger list were filled at Bordeaux and Lisbon.

2—The department advised Americans remaining in Italy after the departure of the S. S. Manhattan tomorrow from Genoa, and desiring to return to the United States, to leave Italy immediately and go to Bordeaux to catch the Washington. The same applies to Americans in Switzerland.

Officials said there were other American passenger ships in the Mediterranean bound for the United States and loaded to capacity with passengers—the President Harrison, from Port Said for New York, and the Exochorda and Excambion from eastern Mediterranean and Italian ports for New York.

"Last Call," Is Inference

In addition there are also 20 someodd American freighters bound from Black Sea and eastern Mediterranean ports to the United States, many of which carry from 10 to 20 passengers.

"Very few, if any, Americans who desire to return to the United States remain in Italy, the Balkans or the Levant—or will remain after tomorrow noon," the department reported.

On January 1 of this year the department estimated nearly 40,000 Americans were living in this area. It is presumed that a large percentage of them have not desired to return to the United States because of marriage to Europeans or family or business connections.

The S. S. Roosevelt, which the State Department sent to Galway, Ireland, to take off Americans gathered from England and Ireland, arrived at Galway last night. The State Department said she would immediately take on passengers and return.

Italians Hasten War Preparation

Front.]

Refusal of the Duce to see Phillips was in no sense a rebuff to the United States or Mr. Roosevelt. If it were only that there would be less anxiety about the immediate future. The reason Mussolini could not receive the envoy is that there is no longer any time for such audiences. Mussolini is seeing nobody except those men, Italian and German, with whom the question of Italy's intervention has to be worked out. In short, the Duce is working night and day in preparation for that tremendous decision which he alone must make.

No one can say that it will necessarily be made or if made that it means war. Nothing irreparable has been done yet and it is always possible that the decision will be put off. Nevertheless, making all qualifications possible there can be no question Italy is very close to the brink of war tonight.

As Phillips has refused any comment whatever on the Roosevelt message it is impossible to say at this end what its contents are or whether the ambassador delivered it to Minister of Foreign Affairs Count Ciano in place of the Duce.

[In Washington Presidential Secretary Early, asked about messages to Rome, said that he could only repeat that there had been an almost "continual correspondence carried on between the President and heads of other governments."]

A decree was published today which will be a jolt to housewives. Starting tomorrow the single quality laundry soap available in Italy will be strictly rationed. It is a very poor form of soap at best, for Italy, like Germany, lacks essential oils and fats.

Traffic Reported Halted

New York, May 31 (INS).—All private automobile traffic in Rome was halted at midnight tonight, according to a German radio broadcast picked up here by the Columbia Broadcasting System.

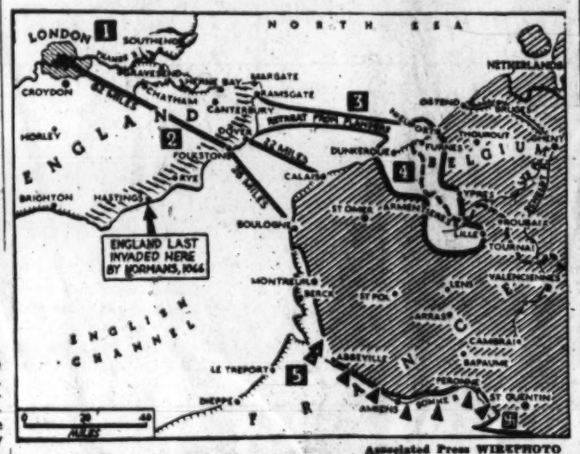

Back From Flanders

Shape of Things to Come?

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Bitter retreat of the British from Flanders (3) continued with strong German forces closing on the Allies, a "bag" (4) which more than vaguely resembled the geographic shape of Italy, still on the verge of entering the war. England arrested more Fifth Columnists in London (1) and guarded its defenses (2) in the southeast. Meantime the French had launched a counterattack against the Nazis and claimed recapture of the Abbeville area (5).

meeting, DNB, official German news agency, announced.

In Italian circles, it was said that Premier Mussolini's entry would be a surprise move that would announce itself in due course.

There was no official confirmation of the Italian reports beyond the authorized assertion that Germany was watching her friendly partner "with confidence."

So confident were the Germans of ultimate victory after their smashing 3-weeks' conquest of The Netherlands, Belgium and a slice of northern France that there was a common tendency to set forth Nazi war aims again.

The authoritative Dienst Aus Deutschland stated that England and France "will be banished in some form to roles of European border areas."

No Place for Britain

"It is not difficult to see on what basis a new order of peace would develop," Dienst said. "Its backbone, according to Berlin views, would be the Berlin-Rome axis."

Dienst said that smaller nations would retain "their natural and legitimate living rights" but that there would be no place in the new European picture for England and France.

While the Germans acknowledged that the Allied withdrawals to England from the French channel port of Dunkerque were having some success and that their own losses were heavy, they said the British apparently were benefiting from foggy, poor flying weather.

However, it was reported here that the German speedboat fleet was proving troublesome with its torpedoes launched at British warships and that German troops pressed to within 6 miles of Dunkerque and were apparently laying down a deadly barrage on what is left of the harbor city.

North and south of Lille, French units continued to resist the German "rub-out" progress but their fate was regarded here as sealed.

Another small Allied force was separated from the main battleground in the north near Cassel.

The Berlin newspaper Lokal Anzeiger, in its description of the scene at Dunkerque, said: "The remaining British force is seeking with every possible means—in small boats or even by swimming—to reach ships which are under protection of night and fog while attempting to save soldiers who can be saved, for England needs every single man now."

The press campaign against French "brutality" reached a new height of fury. This developed the feeling that Germans would be driving toward Paris before another week was out.

The "Engeland song" has been supplanted on Nazi lips by the new war song dinned day and night:

"We are marching victoriously far into France—"

Allies Launching New Offensive From Narvik Base

Copyright by New York Times

Stockholm, May 31.—Having captured Narvik, the Allies are starting an offensive against the main German forces concentrated between Huddalen and Bjoernfjell, while at the same time trying to cut off the retreat of the Germans chased out of Narvik itself.

The offensive against the main German forces is proceeding from Bjoernfjell in a southerly direction along the iron-ore railroad.

Simultaneously the British and French air forces bombed the railroad itself, in the tunnels of which the Germans have fortified themselves.

King Leopold Is Denounced By Parliament

Refugee Legislators Convene in France; To Support Allies

By Jerzy Szapiro.

Copyright by New York Times

Limoges, France, May 31.—All members of the Belgian Parliament at present in France—85 deputies and 54 senators, a little less than half the total number of parliamentarians—met here today and unanimously voted approval of Premier Hubert Pierlot's denunciation of King Leopold's capitulation. They also pledged to the refugee Belgian cabinet full support of its further work in the fight for restitution of Belgium independence.

It was not an official session with power to vote constitutional acts, as less than the necessary quorum was present.

Premier Pierlot, Foreign Minister Paul-Henri Spaak and other cabinet members gave detailed information concerning the events preceding the King's surrender.

Limoge's mayor, French Senator Betoulle, welcomed his Belgian guests in the town hall. M. Gellon, speaker of the Belgian Senate, assured the audience that the Belgian nation would never forget the sacrifices of the country's defenders who laid down their arms as a result of the "infamous order."

"We do not consider ourselves exiles," he said. "We shall go north with redoubled energy. Our common efforts will make Belgium free and independent again."

Capitulation Condemned

Premier Pierlot stated that the "Belgium of 1940 is the same as 1914. There is only one Belgian and it speaks but one language." He announced that several Belgian units had refused to obey King Leopold's order and continue fighting in Flanders.

The resolution, voted unanimously, "condemns" King Leopold's capitulation, "for which he will bear the responsibility in history," and declares that the Parliament has agreed with the government in affirming the legal impossibility of his reigning.

The resolution proclaims the determination of all Belgians in France to be faithful to the Allied cause and their confidence of a final victory in justice and honor.

Off Legion of Honor

Paris, May 31.—King Leopold, 3d, of Beligum, has had his name stricken from the rolls of the French Legion of Honor, where he held the rank of the Grand Cross. The decree announcing this action will appear in tomorrow's official journal.

British Told Hitler Is 'Biting Granite'

London, May 31 (AP).—Arthur Greenwood, Laborite minister without portfolio, assured radio listeners tonight that Adolf Hitler is "biting on granite" and told them there "is no need to be downhearted."

A hint of a new call on the services of civilians in the British war effort was given when Greenwood told the nation we "must face far reaching changes."

90,000 Troops Escape Flanders

Paul Defiant fighters battled 20 German planes over Dunkerque and was said to have boosted to nearly 60 its score of enemy planes brought down within a week. These new-type fighters, flown by almost beardless youngsters, called "the flying kids," have become the terror of the skies, the British say.

Reckon Nazi Loss At 5 to 1

[Seventy-five minutes after the squadron left England, the dispatch said, it was back here, as the youthful leader had promised, "in time for tea."]

The sensational plucking of troops from the French shore and transporting them across the Channel is being accomplished despite an infestation of spies, incessant bombing, midget torpedo boat activity, and a land assault into which the Germans flung much of their might.

[The United Press reported early today that "high military authorities" in London estimated that from 75 to 85 per cent of the "British force and its Allies" had been evacuated from the Flanders pocket.

[The New York Times, quoting the same source, said 75 per cent of the British had escaped, mentioning no Allies.

[There would be quite a difference between these figures, as the French were reported to have three times as many troops in that sector as the 175,000 British. This does not take into account a reported 300,000 Belgians, most of whom surrendered.—Editor's note.]

Returning Tommies declared Nazi losses in Flanders were five times as great as those of the Allies.

A naval spokesman declared the loss of a small transport, three destroyers and several auxiliary vessels was trivial compared with the lives saved.

Commenting on the German claim that the British retreat was a rout, an army spokesman declared that "the hard fact remains that no military operation is so difficult as re-embarkation at the end of a retreat."

He pointed out that, despite the inevitable confusion of the retreat, the removal of "large numbers" of British and French troops "still goes on" with the Germans unable to stop it.

Although the rescue of the bottled army remained Britain's greatest concern, informed London observers said they looked for an early attempt by Adolf Hitler to divide England and France with separate peace offers. These factors were mentioned:

Threat would be made of Italian entry into the war to induce acceptance.

The French would be threatened with a smashing assault by land and air against Paris.

The British would be asked to accept Hitler's terms or face "total war," presumably meaning invasion.

There was no indication anywhere that the British or French would heed separate peace proposals.

Meanwhile the day's developments included the statement from a competent source that Italy had intimated she considered British-Italian negotiations on contraband control as broken off. This came in spite of an agreement on principle last week that an easing of contraband control over Italian ships might be worked out satisfactorily.

The nation, while calling for more planes to turn the tide of war, steeled itself for the expected casualty list from Flanders.

Relatives were unable to get information from returning troops to support their hopes.

Whether the next great assault will be on England or Paris was regarded merely as a matter of timing. The people expect both sooner or later.

Reliable sources said about two-thirds of the 90,000 troops returned to England are British, of which there were originally 175,000 in Flanders. The other troops brought here are Belgian and French.

No casualty figures have been made public for the Allies. The Nazi losses in Flanders, by Allied estimates, total about 500,000 men.

French Drive Nazi Back Over Somme

waters spouting through locks opened by the French were holding back the German effort to smash Dunkerque, the port of exit for the fleeing northern Allies.

The city was surrounded by flood water standing to average depth of a foot and a half.

Part of the French rearguard in Flanders was acknowledged, however, to be "in difficulties."

These men were moving in retreat in a bloody rectangle which earlier had been reported holding generally firm under the assaults of the greatest mechanized German army ever to take the field.

Two muddy, weary and savagely punished divisions of the command of Gen. Rene Jacques Adolphe Prioux—originally totaling about 30,000 men—led the strange march into Dunkerque, the Allied port of exit to the sea.

In a Box of Steel

[Thee general himself has been declared by the Germans to be their captive.]

They moved through the center of a great box of men and steel, its four walls formed of roaring tanks like the locked shields that once protected the phalanxes of Greece.

The Allied corridor of escape stretched from near Lille to Dunkerque.

In a last effort to annihilate the Allied contingents the Nazis threw into the struggle ten armored divisions and three motorized divisions—virtually their entire mechanized strength—in addition to numerous infantry divisions.

They smashed with all their might at Dunkerque, but the French spokesman acknowledged that while little was left of the docks and quays "considerable quantities" of Allied troops were embarking regularly in small boats from which they were being transferred at sea to larger craft.

Off the coast, the British and French fleets laid down a curtain of fire around these men.

"Home from Hell"

A Southeast Port in England, (AP). May 31.—Dead tired, aching for home, the men of the B. E. F. poured on into England tonight, adding chapter after chapter to their epic.

From big liners to tiny boats with only a few men aboard, a great armada brought them home, poured them onto troop trains and went back, under the fire of German guns and bombers, for more.

The men who landed told stories of fighting fiercely only a few hours previously.

"It is an inferno over there; a hell made by man," said one artilleryman.

"The Germans asked for a truce to bury their dead after a 36-hour barrage had held up their advance. 'We replied: 'There's no truce.' And we gave them another seven hours of barrage."

Another soldier said the Germans shelled the British on the Dunkerque wharves with long-range guns. "There were some killed," he added.

Every sort of a story was told of the new German strategy of war. Here was one, told by a Tommy:

"We found 10,000 almost perfect, counterfeit, ten-franc notes on one plane that we brought down. Parachute troops are being given this money to disorganize French finances."

Another Tommy told what happened to parachute troops in Flanders:

"I have seen German corpses landing with as many as 50 bullets in them," he said. "They were killed long before they reached the ground."

Montgomery Clubwomen Keep Staff

By-Laws Revised, Election Postponed; Present Officers Stay Another Year

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

The Post Club Editor.

There was no election of officers yesterday, although it had been scheduled, at the annual May meeting of the Montgomery County Federation of Women's Clubs, in Barnesville, Md. Before the nominating committee presented its report, a revision of the by-laws was passed which automatically continued the present board in office for another year.

The revision provided that, hereafter, officers be elected for three-year terms and that the elections take place concurrently with those of the General and State federations, in 1941. It contained a proviso that the present board hold over.

This gives the president, Mrs. B. Peyton Whalen, with her officers, a third year at the head of the federation. She served previously from 1930 to 1936 and was elected in 1938 for a two-year term.

Other officers are: Mrs. Vestus Wilcox, Gaithersburg, first vice president; Mrs. A. Brookhouse Foster, Bethesda, second vice president; Mrs. Henry Milburn, Kensington, recording secretary; Mrs. Almus Speak, Rockville, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Sidney Karr, Bethesda, treasurer; Mrs. Donald De Lashmutt, Rockville, parliamentarian.

Another proposed revision, designed to give more equitable representation to larger clubs in the federation, was defeated. It proposed that 12 delegates instead of 5 should be the limit in the county federation for any one club. The Woman's Club of Chevy Chase would have been chiefly affected. With a membership of 809 and paying dues on a per capita basis, it now has only five delegates to the federation, the same number as the next largest club, Woman's Community Club of Kensington, with a membership of 125.

Medals were presented to the pioneer club women of the federation, in the afternoon . . . Mrs. Harry C. Armstrong, of Kensington, for the longest continuous membership; Mrs. Whalen, for leadership—a medal which she turned over to the Mutual Improvement Association of Sandy Spring, to be given to its pioneer members. The late Mrs. E. B Hartshorn, founder of the federation, was the pioneer whose memory was honored.

Soroptimists to Dedicate Room

Rose Robinson Cohen, who conducts the Children's Studio of Drama, is a member of the club and directed the play, proceeds of which amounted to $1,000.

England Can't Be Invaded Now, Seversky Says

By the United Press

New York, May 31.—Maj. Alexander P. De Seversky, American aircraft builder and speed flier, said tonight that a German invasion of England cannot be accomplished in next few months and may be staved off long enough to permit the Allies to erect impregnable defenses.

For that reason he anticipates that the heat of the next German thrust very likely will be directed against France.

"There can be no immediate invasion of England," he said, "because, while Germany had complete mastery of the air over Scandinavia she does not have it over England by a long shot. Defensively, Britain is greatly superior."

Blunderbus Bill

The La Follette bill which the Senate approved on Monday was originally designed "to eliminate certain oppressive labor practices," particularly those having to do with industrial espionage and the employment of armed strikebreakers.

The purpose behind the bill is praiseworthy, although it is apparent that certain of the basic provisions would, if enacted into law, create many more abuses than they would correct. But if there is little justification for some of the original provisions there is even less for certain amendments tacked on to the bill before its passage by the Senate.

Thus, at the instance of Senator Reynolds, the Senate wrote in a provision forbidding the employment of more than 10 per cent of aliens in any industry engaged "in interstate or foreign commerce or in the production of goods for such commerce." Another amendment makes it unlawful for "any person engaged in interstate commerce . . . to have in his employ any Communist or member of any Nazi bund organizations."

There is no question that care should be taken to prevent traitorous activities from interfering with the national defense effort. But the added provisions of the La Follette bill are futile in this respect. Of doubtful constitutionality, they place a premium on deceit. A Communist or Nazi intent on sabotaging defense would have little difficulty in circumventing these provisions. But they might easily be used as a bludgeon with which to beat many innocent people who, while neither Communists nor Nazis, nevertheless entertain unpopular views.

The provisions regarding the employment of aliens is blunderbus legislation of the worst type. It makes no distinction between aliens who are wholly loyal to the institutions of the United States and those who are not; no distinction between grateful refugees and conscienceless secret agents.

In order to strike at the small minority who may be willing to abuse American hospitality the measure seeks to penalize aliens who are wholly loyal in spirit and action. The provision arises out of a current of hysterical xenophobia which has no place in this country today or at any other time. And, least of all, does it seem appropriate in a measure ostensibly intended to curb labor abuses.

Uncertain Russia

The German-Russian trade agreement last August revealed a disposition on Stalin's part to become Hitler's economic partner and thus help fortify the Third Reich against the rigors of the Allied blockade. The partition of Poland indicated the Kremlin's readiness to cooperate with Germany in the political sphere. At the same time Communists everywhere, on orders from Moscow, have carried on propaganda against the Allies scarcely distinguishable from that spread by Dr. Goebbels.

Yet a German victory over the Allies would be little short of a catastrophe for the Soviet Union. The Finnish war revealed the inadequacy of the Red army even against a greatly outnumbered foe. That Russia could even begin to stand up against the mechanized forces of the Third Reich is very much open to question.

There appears to be little doubt that Russia wants to remain at peace. Whether she can do so will depend not wholly on Stalin's desires, but on the trend of events. Certainly a move into the Balkans by either Germany or Italy would force Russia very close to war.

It is, therefore, to Russia's interest, as well as to the interest of the Allies, to keep Italy at peace as long as possible. They have, equally, a parallel interest in blocking a total victory by Germany. The possibility of a measure of cooperation between Russia and the Allies, regardless of the ill-concealed bitterness on both sides, is thus again belatedly in view.

Sir Stafford Cripps, Left-wing Laborite who has never hidden his pro-Russian sentiments, seems slated to be Britain's new Ambassador to Moscow. How far he will get with Stalin is anything but clear. The Russians would probably like to do something, negatively if not positively, to hold up the German war machine, for the longer it is held up the longer Russia will be safe from possible attack. Whether this feeling will prove stronger than the very real Russian fear of Germany is still an unanswered question.

For National Security

More important than any details of President Roosevelt's two messages to Congress on national defense is the flexibility which the Administration is showing in meeting a new situation.

The fury of "total war" in Europe has brought this country to a sudden realization that its defenses are grossly inadequate. Whatever may be said of previous neglect, both the President and Congress have moved rapidly in the last two weeks to give the United States the security it demands. Previous concepts of what is essential to safeguard this country against attack have been quickly revised. Our democratic machinery is making rapid adjustments to prepare the Nation for any eventuality.

In his first message on defense the President called for more equipment for the Army and Navy and enlargement of production facilities. His message of yesterday emphasized again the need for more mechanical equipment and laid particular stress upon the training of young men in skills that are essential to a large defense program. He requests another billion dollars to speed the process of turning raw materials and man power into the necessities of national defense.

Any one who measures the inadequacy of our present Army and air force against the possible needs for defense now looming out of the European war will not be inclined to question the advisability of making this additional expenditure. But the most encouraging note in the message is that aimed at the rehabilitation of American man power. "Here as yet undeveloped," he said, "lie the ability and the strength needed in the building up of our armaments to provide a sure industrial foundation for the meeting of any and all defense requirements."

In meeting the menace of depression seven years ago the President showed a great deal of originality as well as courage and determination. The people demanded economic security and he responded with a vigorous program. Frequently unsound remedies were adopted. Yet the country made striking progress toward recovery in those early days of the New Deal, partly because a program of action was energetically pursued.

Today the public is demanding a different type of security—security against possible aggression directed at the Western Hemisphere. Once more the Government is acting with dispatch and vigor. In addition to appropriating money for guns, tanks, aircraft and ammunition it is levying new taxes and attempting to organize industry for the more effective production of defense equipment.

These are initial steps. If the United States is to attain the strength it should have to meet any threat emerging from the chaos of the war, our entire economic system must swing into action that it has not experienced since 1929. Achievement of that objective will require more courage than any step the Administration has thus far taken.

Our economic system has been chugging along on six of its eight cylinders for too long a period. Millions of men, maintained in idleness, have lost skills now in urgent demand. Many others have had no opportunity for training to equip them for industrial service.

National security now demands that our economic system operate with full efficiency. The obligation of the Government will not be fulfilled merely by training certain groups for special tasks in the defense program, important though that training program is. The real test will come in the Administration's response to the rising demand for adjustment of policies that have helped to keep men and money unemployed.

National security in this period of turmoil will require a truly national effort. It cannot be obtained merely by adding a few more billions to the national debt. Cooperation from every group will be required. Leadership in revitalizing our entire economic system thus becomes a next step of the utmost importance.

Mr. McNutt's Bow

In laying aside his own candidacy to urge renomination of President Roosevelt, Paul V. McNutt can scarcely be said to have made a magnanimous gesture. Rather he bowed to what appears to be the inevitable.

Long before Mr. McNutt spoke it was evident that Mr. Roosevelt would be the 1940 standard-bearer of the Democratic Party unless he took vigorous measures to eliminate himself. Despite the vague commitments of some State delegations to the forthcoming Chicago convention, a large majority of the delegates are lined up for the President. Without making a single outright campaign speech or even indicating that he would accept a third nomination, he has quietly permitted the war to disrupt the campaigns of all his Democratic rivals.

In these circumstances Mr. McNutt had nothing to lose by publicly urging the President to run again and calling upon other Democratic candidates to do likewise. On the contrary, that deference to his chief may enhance in some measure the Federal Security Administrator's chance of obtaining the Vice Presidential nomination. At least, Mr. McNutt's third-term gesture and his Memorial Day address are obvious bids for second place on the ticket.

Unless the President should suddenly upset all calculations by withdrawing from the race, interest in the Chicago convention from now on will center in the Vice Presidential nomination and the platform. Indeed, the third-term movement has gone so far that it could not be stopped without creating an anti-climax at Chicago. No party can stake most of its hopes on one candidate and suddenly lose that candidate without suffering a very severe set-back.

Mr. McNutt has simply taken a realistic view of the trend of events. It would not be surprising if other candidates for the Democratic nomination follow his example.

An Epic Retreat

Whatever the magnitude of the Allied defeat, the evacuation of the British and French troops from Flanders will be remembered as one of the most magnificent operations of the war and perhaps of all military history. This is sufficiently attested by the admiration it has won even from Germans themselves. Indeed this retreat has even now attained an epic quality comparable to the famous march of the Greek mercenaries from Persia or to the passage of the River Beresina by the remnants of Napoleon's Grande Armee.

Estimates of the number of troops that have reached the coast and have been safely ferried across the Channel through the "blizzard of bombs" have varied from as many as 300,000 men—a figure based, curiously enough, on German reports—to merely a few thousands. A more credible figure is in the neighborhood of 100,000. This would seem to comprise between one-fourth and one-third of the British and French forces that were rushed to the support of the Dutch and Belgian armies at the beginning of the lightning invasion.

Even under favorable circumstances a retreat is admittedly a most difficult maneuver, a retreat involving reembarkation, harassed from the air and complicated by swarms of maddened refugees is infinitely so. But to understand the accomplishment it is also necessary to remember that this army was attacked within one of the most deadly of all tactical patterns—an approximate rectangle that presently became a triangle with its base at the sea.

The right flank of this army had been opened to the enemy by the collapse of the French defenses after the breakthrough at Sedan, necessitating an immediate retreat and re-formation of its lines. Before this unimagined disaster could be repaired, the left flank also was opened by the default of Leopold's Belgians, ending any hope of rescue by a counter-attack from the main French army to the south. The Flanders army was totally, as they say, "in the air" and apparently doomed to complete encirclement as one after another of the Channel ports fell to the enemy. Meantime, in a series of concentric operations, the Germans were slicing off unit after unit from its rear.

Only by incessant and almost superhumanly heroic rearguard actions and the arrival of naval and land reenforcements from England could the strip of coast line between Nieuport and Dunkerque be held open. It is apparently still open and as long as this is the case the possibility of rescue for perhaps as much as another third of the army is also open.

The effect of the retreat on the general military situation is not yet clear. Heavy as has been the cost in lives and equipment, there is reason to believe that the losses of the victorious Germans have been even heavier, though the boasted ratio of 5 to 1 seems an absurd exaggeration.

One thing, however, is certain: Had the retreat been less skillfully conceived, had the heroism of the men who executed it been less than superb, France's peril would have been magnified. As it is, Gen. Weygand has been given a respite in which to consolidate his new front. Behind this line the main French army and a new British force await whatever blow is next to come.

Rare is the man who won't pick up a girl who falls for him.

Another combination often noted in the species homo sapiens is a flat head and a sharp tongue.

Doctors' Day

From the New York World-Telegram

That great Mississippi statesman, Senator Theodore G. (The Man) Bilbo, urges Congress to adopt a resolution designating June 22 as "Doctors' Day"—a day, he says, upon which all Americans should visit their physicians or send them "messages of love and gratitude."

Our doc tells us that, while touched by Senator Bilbo's beautiful thought, he could get along with fewer messages of love and gratitude and more expressing the noble sentiment, "Inclosed please find check."

Military Training

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial "Guns for the CCC!" hit the spot—the solar plexus of American defense. Your paper has been so strong for common sense and a strong defense during the past six months that I wonder if the above mentioned editorial wasn't one left over from a year ago that slipped into print by accident. You state "The Civilian Conservation Corps was formed to save our natural resources and to provide employment for young men who could not find work elsewhere." It seems highly probable that the best way to save our natural resources may be, in the near future, a great many young men with guns.

Still, I admit it isn't fair to force military training on the CCC alone. If there is the slightest indication that we will be involved in this war why don't we have national compulsory military training?

What We Gained

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Quite a few like to repeat "we went to war in Europe once and got out of it; 0," by voice or in print like Mr. Movius in his letter published May 30. It seems needful to note that we actually gained nearly a generation of peace, for with the spirit of pre-1914 Germany so much like that of today, there is every reason to suppose that, if it had not been for the victory of 1918, the dangers that now alarm us would have materialized much sooner. There were several abortive attempts by German colonists in South America as it was.

And we might with grace remember that the "Allies" were fighting our battle then as now, and for a year after our declaration while we were getting ready. Of course their myriads who died, and our tens of thousands, got nothing. The pomp of Memorial Days helps us maybe, but them not at all. However, this willingness to die for countrymen and for principle is admirable, most agree, and what is needed is leadership to direct it soon enough, and in the right direction, if this Nation is to remain a "going concern" for a generation or two longer, even if not for Hitler's "thousand years."

WILLIAM H. SPICER, M. D.

On Relief Bans

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial in The Post of May 24 entitled "The Relief Bill" moved me to exclaim, "Consistency, thou art a mule," and to wonder if the editorial policy of your hitherto valued and esteemed sheet has become altogether Red?

How can you advocate furnishing work for Communists and members of the Nazi bund at the expense of the taxpayers, even on the theory that relief is "not to serve as an instrumentality for punishing individuals associated with movements which are recognized as legal?" Why should the taxpayers furnish the members of the Communist Party support and the sinews with which to undermine the Government and accomplish their admitted purpose?

HARRY S. BARGER.

Library Reading Room

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One of the first places in the National Capital to which constituents of Senators and Representatives resort when visiting Washington is the Congressional Library, in order to read the home papers.

Heretofore, this section of the Library was located in a commodious and well-lighted room in the Library Building. For some reason this room has been taken for other purposes and the newspaper and magazine section relegated to a long, narrow, not well-lighted room on the ground floor, out of sight and not easily accessible to strangers.

It is to be hoped that enterprising members of Congress will give this matter attention.

A CONSTITUENT.
Washington, May 28.

On Naturalization

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the name of voteless, unorganized, but law abiding and very much misunderstood foreign born, I wish to thank the editor of The Post for the two recent articles apropos the "alien" question. It is only fair, however, to state that not all who have not become legally naturalized are either alien to the ideas and ideals of George Washington, nor are they to be blamed for the many legal technicalities which have sometimes turned a naturalization event into a veritable ordeal, and rejection on the part of courts of the right of the applicant to his legal papers.

The foreign born should have been accorded at least as much right to an attorney, as is provided to ordinary criminals by the Constitution, to plead his cause, when his motives and merits are often misunderstood due to his imperfect knowledge or faulty pronunciation of the English language.

In consideration of so many such facts prejudicial to the interests of the average foreign born, it should be noticed that it is not a question of legal status nor civil liberties the great and noble President makes mention of, but the woeful lack of understanding of the situation on the part of the majority of Americans that causes them to think or act unjustly toward persons who feel they have already been injured by not being accorded their legal papers, and the general misunderstanding adding up to an insult, as if the applicants had been deliberately careless or negligent, when the reverse may have been true. In view of these facts, registration of such persons would amount to stigmatizing them as objects of distrust. OBSERVER.
Washington, May 28.

Would Emulate Swiss

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To get off to a good start in our defense program, would it not be sensible and forthright to follow the practice of Switzerland, mentioned May 27 by one of your columnists, and legislate all anti-American organizations out of existence? Why should we start an enormously expensive armament building game burdened with that handicap? "Peacetime privileges no longer apply," to paraphrase Walter Lippmann in his "All or Nothing" article.

If we are to concentrate on defense, and we ought to, we might make it an infraction of law, punishable by internment or deportation, for the responsible editor, publisher, or distributor of a foreign language newspaper to attack our Government or the governments of our Allies, to defend atrocities committed by our common enemy, or to attempt to proselyte our citizens by a barrage of infamous untruths or half-truths, which are worse.

Next to go should be societies operating under the control of foreign states. Money in staggering figures is needed for the building of airplanes and armaments. Why waste large sums investigating this formidable list of enemies who batten on our indulgence? We know beyond question the groups were created and are being maintained for the purpose of subverting our people.

FIFTH GENERATION AMERICAN
Washington, May 28.

Asks Respite

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Our youth are fed up on war news and pictures. Why not give them a little rest and more space to activities of this younger generation who are to be the men of tomorrow?

Soon thousands will walk through the school doors for the last time, receive their well-earned diplomas, and go out into the world.

For the sake of out dear Heavenly Father, who "knoweth each sparrow that falleth" let us get behind them, give them all the encouragement and love it is humanly possible to give. LELA E. HILLERS.
Washington, May 28.

Educational Opportunity

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: That each new generation of Americans, white and colored, is tending to be disproportionately recruited from sections of the population with low living standards and inferior educational resources, affecting the educational and economic efforts to realize better civic conditions, deserves more attention than it gets. We seem to be more conscious of international relations than of the bond-of-the-generations, and it is just that defect in our culture, today, that threatens democracy.

Increased juvenile delinquency; preponderance of crime among the young men and women formerly strongly ambitious, but now shut out of employment because of preference of better educated persons; the growing destructive attitude toward public property by the children of the poor, all indicate a social pathology not to be overlooked further with impunity.

In the public schools, pupils from better homes find poorer children hostile and antagonistic, even assuming a segregative habit and attempting persecution of any single persons of the better circumstanced who may be present. The large place occupied by the community center and recreation provisions, belatedly provided, offset more violent reactions.

It is not widely recognized that such conditions prevent satisfactory results from school funds, demanding outlays of money, time, energy and adjustment procedure upon the backward, irregularly attending, and trouble-makers. These retard the more intelligent, yet make no adequate progress themselves.

The Congress is hard to persuade that the day has gone when the number of children of a given age could be more or less adequately provided with seats in schools at so many per teacher and a quota of standard supplies. Schools for backward and crippled children are being grudgingly provided, as well as the differentiations and personnel demanded by seemingly normal conditions; specialization in industry and business is expected, but "Taxpayers' Associations" oppose it for charitable and public educational plants, as do some educational administrators, except at the top.

The late David Starr Jordan insisted that "the greatest political economy is the care and culture of man," but generally the more prosperous have seemed to be unaffected by it, except when rising costs and the charities and the burden of relief forced it upon their attention.

Unless there is definite preparation for making a brave, new world, the downward sweep of our culture will be submerged by the weight of our neglected population. It has happened in history.

CHARLES M. THOMAS,
President, Federation of Civic Associations.

The Post Impressionist

Semper Fidelis

Practically all of the young men of the Ozark region, when they want to enter the armed services, enlist in the Navy. At first sight it seems strange that lads from this inland hill country should choose the life of a sailor, but again it may be that the complete change from everything they have known before is the attractive feature. At any rate, to the Navy they go, with a very few exceptions in favor of the Army.

As for the Marine Corps, I am safe in saying that no more than five people in Potter had ever so much as seen a marine until last Thursday night. Accordingly, at our regular meeting of the Workers' and Gamblers' Club of Potter, we were galloping through

"Gwine a-run all night,
Gwine a-run all day;
Bet my money on the bob-tailed nag,
Somebody bet on the bay,"

when a young man in the blue dress uniform of the Marine Corps entered, took his seat at a table and asked for a beer. The excitement and interest were intense.

He was tall, with a magnificent chest bedaubed with medals testifying to his valor and his superior marksmanship with everything from a .22 to a French 75, with machine guns and antiaircraft thrown in. His uniform (and surely the Marine Corps blues would excite the admiration and envy of Herman Goering himself) fitted him like the skin on an apple. His handsome face was richly tanned. His eyes were brown and lustrous. His hair was dark and curly. Betty Lou took one look at him, choked on her beer and practically swooned.

After a pause for refreshments and discussion of the new arrival, at my suggestion that he might come from Quantico we sang "All Quiet Along the Potomac Tonight," complete with fiddle, git-tar, and our splendid Workers' Chorus. On the sound effects, which were my province, we rather fell down, for I have not yet been able to contrive the effect of "Taps" sounded offstage. Imagine then our delight when at the crucial point the marine obliged with a convincing and moving rendition of the bugle call, contrived by I know not what vocal magic.

Mrs. Northport, our presiding officer and the proprietor of the Blue and Gold Tavern, at once invited the young man to sit at our table and join in our songs. He eagerly accepted, and we were careful to place him next to Betty Lou. His name was Billy, he had just finished his first hitch in the Marine Corps, he was on his way to visit his parents in Texas and then he was going to re-enlist. After we had elicited this information, Pay-Day ordered another round of beers in honor of our guest, and we settled back to listen to an account of his experiences in China.

Betty Lou looked up at him as he talked, her big blue eyes wide with admiration, her golden hair gleaming richly, her lovely white teeth showing through half-parted lips. Betty Lou was by far the most beautiful girl in Potter, but bad luck had pursued her relentlessly. When she was 18 she had married a sailor, with the understanding that when his hitch was completed he would come back and help her and her father with their grocery store. The perfidious sailor, however, had re-enlisted, so Betty Lou divorced him. After a suitable interval she married a cavalryman from a regiment in a neighboring State, but he contracted pneumonia and died. And now, at 23, Betty Lou was beginning to be worried, for there were no eligible young men anywhere in Potter or its vicinity, the lure of California or of the cities having drawn them away, as it has in so many little Southern towns.

And Billy was by no means insensible to Betty Lou's golden beauty. He was telling his stories directly to her now, and I am sure he never had a more attractive and attentive audience. Then we suggested some songs, and presently he volunteered to teach us "The Marines' Hymn."

At the close of the evening he was so pleased with our hospitality and Betty Lou's beauty that he decided that he might as well stay in Potter for a couple of days before going on to Texas. And he pleased us all by offering to see Betty Lou home.

Those were halcyon days for Betty Lou. It was spring, and they walked in the woods among the dogwood and redbud. They divided their evenings between dancing at the Spotted Owl and singing at the Blue and Gold. Betty Lou demonstrated her skill at cooking by entertaining the marine at every meal, suitably chaperoned by her father, who announced that Billy was a splendid young man.

We all agreed with him. Billy was handsome, his manners were excellent, he drank no more beer than was necessary to be sociable and his speech was cultivated.

When Billy left at the end of those two blissful days, he promised faithfully to write to Betty Lou from Texas, and he promised even more faithfully to come back through Potter on his way to Quantico.

"It's all too good to be true," Betty Lou confided to me. "Do you suppose he'll really come back?"

"Of course he will, honey-bunny-boo," I assured her. "You know the motto of the Marine Corps: Semper Fidelis."

"And what does that mean?"

"Faithful forever."

"I wish I could believe it," sighed Betty Lou.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Guardians Of America's Fate

THE CRITICAL problem at this moment in Washington is the organization of what may be called the high command, where decisions of transcendent political importance will have to be made almost immediately and from which over a long subsequent period of time must come the planning and the direction of the national defense. The primary responsibility is, of course, vested in the President but the President's powers are not adequate or effective without the support of Congress and without the enlistment of the energies of the people.

However, in this great business "the President" is not just the man, namely Mr. Roosevelt, who holds the office. The President is an institution, the main organ of government for the conduct of foreign affairs, for the raising and equipping of the armed forces, for the command of those forces, and for the management of the Nation's effort. It is obvious that no human being can personally exercise the whole power of the Presidency; this is beyond the capacity of the human mind, and an attempt to regard the powers of the Presidency as the personal responsibility of any man who happens to be in the White House is absolutely certain to lead to confusion and failure.

The man who is President—whatever his name or his party—must at a time like this regard the Presidency as an organized command of highly responsible men whom he selects, over whom he presides, whom he inspires, but only, in the very largest questions of policy, directs. He must not regard the defense administrators as his personal agents and his personal council any more than he would—in time of actual war—presume to tell the commander of the fleet what must be the tactical disposition of the navy.

If this distinction between the Presidency and the man who is President is forgotten or confused, the President will attend to so many things that he will never have time or energy for the greatest things, and the administrators will become bogged down in the mire of bureaucratic timidity and jealousy.

FOR THE GREAT emergency in which this country finds itself it will be well to fix clearly in our minds that the national defense has to be organized both through decisions in foreign policy and through the raising, training, and equipping of the armed forces. The decisions in foreign policy will in the present crisis have to be made in the very early stages of the defense program, long before the program has been carried out, and these decisions will be of such a character that they may determine the problem of American defense for generations to come.

President Roosevelt must be fully aware that in the next weeks or even days the country may be confronted with very hard choices affecting its vital interests and its basic security in both oceans, and in this whole hemisphere from Canada to South America. The informed in Washington have just recently begun to realize how near we may be to the necessity of taking decisions which are as momentous as any in our whole history.

THEY ARE decisions which cannot be taken by one man and his personal advisers; they are decisions like those which preceded the announcement of the Monroe Doctrine. It will be recalled that in that critical time President Monroe laid the whole matter before the elder statesmen of the Republic, in office and in retirement, before making up his mind. Mr. Roosevelt is now on the very verge of being presented with as great or greater issues than was President Monroe, issues which cannot be evaded, issues which, however they are decided, will produce momentous consequences.

It is imperative that he should take at once into his complete confidence the leaders of Congress and the elder statesmen of both parties, and that they should become prepared by first-hand knowledge of the situation in order that they may share with him the awful burden, and in order that the people may feel certain that the decisions are the best that can be made. With the help of the American leaders the President can, then, take the nation into his confidence, and tell them the truth of what is happening and of what is impending. This is not a question of a coalition government or of any kind of political window-dressing. This is a question of taking decisions affecting vitally the defense of America: the majority and minority leaders in both houses of Congress, the Vice President and the Speaker, the titular heads of the Republican Party, the Ex-President of the United States, Mr. Hoover,—and also, I believe, the Chief Justice—should be called upon to formulate the decisions. It is a matter for the whole government representing the whole people.

WHEREAS in these matters of the highest policy the decisions need to be taken by the President, with the advice and support of the representatives of the Nation, in the actual organization of the national defense there is needed above all others things clearly defined responsibility and full authority.

It is amateurish, for example, to give the country the impression that its defenses are to be improved by a commission consisting of seven equally responsible persons; and we may assume, I suppose, that no one is actually thinking of making Mr. Knudsen, for example, get the consent of his six colleagues in planning and directing a program of aircraft production. Yet no one can be sure that he will not have to get their consent, or that cabinet officers will take orders from him, or that he will not wear himself out trying to persuade the President to crack down on obstructionists. For this reason the present organization is radically defective. Therefore Messrs. Knudsen, Stettinius, and Budd—the men actually charged with producing the goods—will do well before they go any further to insist upon a much more workable organization. There is no use their starting to work until they have the proper tools. They do not have them now in an arrangement where they derive their own authority from the President personally and their knowledge of what the armed forces require of them from the virtually headless War and Navy Departments.

THE PROPER solution, as Mr. Hoover has demonstrated, is to establish with all necessary powers a Munitions Administration with a single responsible head who will select the production managers to plan and direct the procurement of supplies. There should then be appointed a new Secretary of War, and a new Secretary of the Navy to tell the Munitions Administration what is needed and in what order of urgency, and also to make sure that the best commanders available are in charge of the naval and military forces. Finally, there should be appointed a new Secretary of Labor who, while protecting standards necessary to support health and efficiency, can, and will support the Munitions Administration by measures to increase the productivity of the workers and by measures to train the unskilled for skilled trades.

These new posts should not be given to politicians, Republican or Democratic, for the purpose of presenting the appearance of a national government. They should be given to experienced executives for the purpose of making the national defense efficient.

THE BALTIMORE SUN spoke the profound truth when it said yesterday that "Mr. Roosevelt and his subordinates must stop under-estimating the character of the American people." They must stop flinching at the prospect of having to tell the people the hard truth about what confronts them and about what it means in the way of work and sacrifice. They can count upon the patriotism of the American people to withstand and endure the things that may now be in store for them,—provided only the people know that their fate is not in the hands of any one man and that the ablest and the wisest and the strongest men available are on guard and in command.

Illness Among Workers In Industry Declining

Illness among industrial workers is on the decline, particularly where men are concerned, the United States Public Health Service disclosed yesterday.

Diseases showing downward trends among men in the three industrial groups—iron and steel, public utilities and miscellaneous industries—were bronchitis, afflictions of the pharynx and tonsils, pneumonia and respiratory tuberculosis.

Appendicitis and diseases of the circulatory system show an upward trend, however, according to the Public Health Service Report submitted by William M. Gafafer, senior statistician.

Communist Catspaw

HAVING CALLED attention to Harold Ickes' tolerance for Trojan horse groups of the Communist Party, naming the New York Newspaper Guild as one of them, I will now breathe on the dice and make my point. The New York guild is dominated by Communists and, by its own strength, in collaboration with Chicago and California Communists and acquiescent, indifferent or politically naive groups, it dominates the affairs and policies of the American Newspaper Guild, which is the national, parent organization and a member of the C. I. O. in California, it may be remembered, the guild, as a member of the C. I. O., acquiesced in the indorsement of the totalitarian ham 'n' eggs proposition, which began as a racket and became an ominous political movement last fall.

For corroboration of my contention that the New York guild is controlled by the Communists I will quote from a publication called the Guild Progressive, turned out by the American members of the guild in New York who have started a rebellion against the Communist leadership. The authors of this paper all sign their names to their publication, which they were forced to establish because the official organ of the guild, the Guild Reporter, is notoriously partial to the officials in power and the Communist party line.

"FOR MONTHS the management of the New York guild has permitted Communist activity in its headquarters, thus alienating many members," says the Guild Progressive of March 30. "For months the rank and file has found itself affiliated with what have not infrequently turned out to be Browder's 'transmission belts.' For months the management has permitted the union to be used as the catspaw of a partisan clique—well-proven to be Communist—now fighting another group for control of the American Labor Party. During this time Morris Watson, a paid vice president of the American Newspaper Guild (the national organization), has made almost daily use of the Daily Worker, official organ of the Communist Party, in his activity as chairman of the 'progressive committee to rebuild the American Labor Party.' (The progressive committee is the Communist wing of the American Labor Party.)

"For several successive weekends the management has permitted this 'rebuilding committee' to use the guild's headquarters for gala cocktail parties and dances. The Citizen, newspaper of the 'rebuilders' and the Daily Worker advertised these parties, and the committee was permitted to use the guild headquarters to raise funds."

In the issue of January 30 the Guild Progressive said:

"The guild leadership is primarily concerned with a narrow circle of outside interests. Anyone with a glimmer of political sophistication knows that the guild is endlessly condemning the special foes of the Communist Party and praising the organizations it (the Communist Party) approves regardless of whether the guild's welfare is involved. Unfortunately, our current leadership is concerned with controlling the guild primarily to further the Communist approach to every problem, including the election of a city councilman, even at the expense of a strong guild."

IN THIS ISSUE of May 15 the Progressive said the controlling faction had as its center a large group consisting of members of the Communist Party who had arrogated to themselves the complete control of the New York guild.

"This long-standing faction," the Progressive said, "has permitted an effective voice in the guild government only (1) to secret members of the Communist Party and (2) to persons neutral or indifferent to communist influence in guild affairs. All persons of other political coloration have been systematically excluded from guild councils and guild activity. They have not been wanted except as dutifully paying members. They have been made to feel that they were not wanted."

"As to the existence of a Communist fraction which caucuses regularly," the Progressive claims to have "specific facts such as the names of members affiliated with the Communist Party and how they work."

This is a rank-and-file rebellion within the guild by members who have suffered long at the hands of the Communists, by which it is hoped to overthrow Communist rule in the national convention in Memphis in July. The Communists, incidentally, are, in the main, New Yorkers, and most of them are not interested in newspaper work except as a means of extending Communist control, including party censorship, to the entire American press, through the closed shop.

The invitation to Ickes, which he accepted, was arranged by this controlling Communist faction, the political color—or odor—of which it must be assumed that a man of his sagacity well knew.

Roosevelt's Message

Text of President's Defense Plea

The almost incredible events of the past two weeks in the European conflict, particularly as a result of the use of aviation and mechanized equipment, together with the possible consequences of further developments, necessitate another enlargement of our military program.

No individual, no group can clearly foretell the future. As long, however, as a possibility exists that not one continent or two continents but all continents may become involved in a world war, reasonable precaution demands that American defense be made more certain.

An investigation into manufacturing resources since my message of May 16, to determine the practicability of placing additional orders with industry for special material, both to provide an early expansion of existing production facilities, and to obtain increased quantities of the special weapons concerned, has caused the War and Navy Departments to submit to me an urgent and new recommendation that increased appropriations and authorizations for the national defense be made before the adjournment of the present Congress.

Over and beyond the acquisition of this actual material is the evident requirement for the immediate creation of additional production facilities to meet possible future emergencies as well as present deficiencies in the making of munitions, such as guns, ammunition and fire control equipment. These facilities require a long time to create and to reach quantity production. The increased gravity of the situation indicates that action should be taken without delay.

The problem of defending our national institutions and territorial integrity is no longer a problem for men equipped simply with an indomitable determination. Modern defense requires that this determination be supported by the highly developed machinery of our industrial productive capacity.

The expansion of our defense program makes it necessary that we undertake immediately the training and retaining of our people, and especially our young people, for employment in industry and in service in the Army and Navy.

The requirements of industry and the expanded armed forces for persons with experience in mechanical and manual fields are obviously going to be great. We do not have such trained persons in the number that will be required for the tasks that lie ahead of us if our defense is to be assured. We have, therefore, the task of training a large number in the skills and semiskills required by modern production in industry and by a highly mechanized defense force in the Army and Navy. A primary consideration in the training of skills must be, not the existing distribution of workers among skilled fields, but the distribution that would be required if our industrial machine and our defensive forces were fully mobilized.

In the national effort for defense upon which we are now engaged, it is imperative that we make full and effective use of the mighty capacities that lie in our population. Here as yet undeveloped lie the ability and the strength needed in the building up of our armaments to provide a sure industrial foundation for the meeting of any and all defense requirements. Without the full development of these skills, our national defense will be less than it must be in the critical days which lie ahead. Without the full contribution of our people, our defense cannot attain the invulnerability which the Nation demands and which we are determined it shall have.

The one most obvious lesson of the present war in Europe is the value of the factor of speed. There is definite danger in waiting to order the complete equipping and training of armies after a war begins.

Therefore, I suggest the speedy enlargement of the program for equipping and training in the light of our defense needs.

I have instructed the representatives of the War and Navy Departments and also the representatives of the several agencies dealing with the training of young men for noncombatant services to make available to the appropriate committees of the Congress the plans and proposals which they have laid before me.

These plans call for immediate appropriations to carry forward Congressional decisions in bills already pending, for immediate appropriations to add to the program and for authorizations to enter into contracts which it will take some time to complete.

There is a specific recommendation I would make in concluding this message, that before adjournment this Congress grant me the authority to call into active service such portion of the National Guard as may be deemed necessary to maintain our position of neutrality and to safeguard the national defense, this to include authority to call into active service the necessary Reserve personnel.

The amount involved are large—over $1,000,000,000—but I believe that for national safety the needs are urgent.

Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett

Of Headline Timeliness

ALTHOUGH—or perhaps because—it is the fruit of more than two years of research and discussion by a group headed by Maj. Gen. Frank R. McCoy (retired), Harold Tobin and Percy Bidwell's "Mobilizing Civilian America" (Council on foreign relations, $2.75) is a book of headline timeliness.

On nothing is America more united today than on the necessity of enlarging and developing its program of national defense. On nothing is it less united than on the significance of those apparently simple words; and it would be a tragedy if the essential national discussion of their meaning should degenerate into an incident of a political campaign. It seems hardly too much to say that no political spokesman or editorial writer who has not digested the record set forth in this little book should dare to express himself on the subject today.

For this is the record of what we did, under pressure, between 1916 and the Armistice, and of subsequent expert discussion of programs for another national emergency. The emergency is here. So is the record—largely neglected.

The story really begins with the national defense act of June 3, 1916, which led, largely in response to the initiative of men outside the government (Howard E. Coffin, Elihu Root and Leonard Wood among their leaders) to the formation, in October, 1916, of a council of national defense, consisting of six Cabinet members, with an advisory commission, the historical forerunner of the commission named last Tuesday by President Roosevelt. Out of this commission evolved, under the pressure of war emergencies, the powerful War Industries Board, the War Labor Administration, the food, fuel and railroad administrations, the War Finance Corporation and a host of other temporary agencies of coordination.

It is interesting to compare the advisory commissions named in 1916 and in 1940. President Wilson named Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railway, to coordinate transportation (President Roosevelt named Ralph Budd, of the C. B. & Q.); Bernard Baruch to organize raw materials (roughly comparable to the position of Mr. Stettinius today); Howard E. Coffin, of the Hudson Motor Co. (compare Mr. Knudsen, of General Motors); Samuel Gompers (Sidney Hillman takes his place today); Hollis Godfrey, of the Drexel Institute; Julius Rosenwald, of Sears, Roebuck, and Franklin H. Martin, M. D. (Mr. Roosevelt named Chester C. Davis, an agricultural expert now on the Federal Reserve Board; Leon Henderson, a New Deal economist now on the Securities and Exchange Commission, and Dean Harriet Elliott, of the University of North Carolina, to represent consumers, and W. H. McReynolds as coordinator.)

THE INDUSTRIAL mobilization of 1917-18 was, as Mr. Tobin reports "pure improvisation." It stumbled through successive patterns of organization; it was largely the technique devised by Mr. Baruch's committee on raw materials, and practiced under him by the War Industries Board, which saved the Nation from chaos.

Prohibition Revival

The Prohibition Party is planning to leap into the 1940 campaign and Roger Babson, ardent dry, will run for the Presidency on a Prohibition ticket. Mr. Babson denies that his slogan is "I would rather be wrong than be President."

• • • •

It seems only yesterday that America was knocking on iron gates whispering passwords through peepholes, climbing up two flights to get a drink and saying "This is awful stuff, but I've had worse."

• • • •

Millions of Americans thought that it would be a long time before a peep was heard from anybody in favor of a restoration of the "Just off a boat," era, but you don't even have to listen hard to hear it.

• • • •

In fact, the Prohibitionists are talking with their old-time confidence and throwing their voices without restraint. There are observers who think the Drys will show a big gain in votes this year. And they probably will, thanks to a strong helping hand from the liquor interests.

• • • •

Those who favor Prohibition have had every cooperation from the opposition. Cafes grossly overcharging the public, cocktail bars making a speciality of the women's and children's trade and liquor offered for sale in "kiddy bottles" have helped the Prohibition Party.

• • • •

And there's the custom of "shoving" the cheap bar liquor off on the customer who can't afford more than 40 cents a drink. Boy, has this driven many a drinker into support of the Babson Fusileers!

• • • •

Special bargain days sales of whiskies in drugstore windows, cocktails in dairy lunchrooms and the spectacle of grandma, mother and sister Susie climbing all over the bars in open-faced de luxe restaurants and clubs aren't contributing to long life for repeal either.

• • • •

Prohibitionists put over the dry law with a great deal of talk about the evil of the old-fashioned saloon. But it was a place of sweetness and light to many modern cafes. And the old-fashioned proprietor excluded high school girls and made even the adult females feel unwelcome. He had no matinee trade.

• • • •

Seeks to Collect Loan Made to U. S. in 1777

W. H. Graham, with offices at 711 Woodward Building, said yesterday he was trying to locate additional descendants of Jacob De Haven with the hope of collecting from the government $4,000,000 as principal andd interest on a loan De Haven is said to have made to support George Washington's army at Valley Forge.

Graham said his interest was aroused more than a year ago because his first wife was among the 200 or 300 presumable heirs. De Haven, it is contended, loaned the money directly to the Continental Congress in 1777.

The Grim Outlook

By Mark Sullivan

Should U. S. Wait?

THE AIM of this column today is to make clear one effect of events in Europe on the United States. The effect here dealt with is one of very many. Though the phase here described is small, it has a most serious bearing on the future.

To begin, go for a moment to Amsterdam in Holland. There, this week the Germans set up whatever is to be their form of government of Holland for the immediate future. Since the actual conquest of Holland, early in May, a German military official has had sole authority. Beginning this week the authority is to be divided between a German military and a German civil official. The nature of Germany's government of Holland is not made fully clear in the dispatches. Apparently many of the former Holland laws are to be kept in effect for the time being. In the dispatch there is a significant phrase, "communal relations with the Reich."

However, the precise nature of Germany's dominion over Holland during the indefinite future is not material. It is enough that Germany is in possession of Holland, can do with Holland what she wishes.

Now come across the ocean. In the West Indies and South America are some dependencies of Holland, Dutch Guiana and some small islands. Strictly, we must say former dependencies of Holland. Since Germany has by arms acquired dominion over Holland in Europe, she has by that same act acquired rights over Holland dependencies on this side the ocean (and elsewhere). Germany's rights over the Dutch dependencies in our hemisphere are identical with her rights over Holland in Europe. The difference, for the present, is that Germany cannot exercise her rights in the West Indies—she cannot take actual physical possession of this Dutch territory over here as she has of Holland.

THE REASON Germany cannot, for the present, take physical possession of the Dutch dependencies in the West Indies, is that she cannot get to them—because the British and French are still in control of the sea.

But if Germany wins the war, if she completely conquers Britain and France, she can then take physical possession of the Dutch territory in the West Indies. She can run up the Swastika flag there. She can set up a German government there. She will own these West Indies islands, as completely as she owns Berlin. She can do what she wishes there. She can fortify these West Indies islands. She can set up a naval base there. She can set up an airplane base there.

Now we come to the concern of the United States. The United States cannot permit Germany to take possession of those West Indies islands. We cannot permit it because it would be a violation of our century-old Monroe doctrine. We cannot permit it because those islands are close to the Panama Canal. We cannot permit it because Germany, once in possession of those West Indies islands, could make, or at least attempt, any sort or degree of conquest she chooses in the Western Hemisphere. That we cannot permit Germany to take possession of this Holland territory in the Western Hemisphere is conceded by practically everyone.

Not quite everyone. There are some dissenters. These dissenters interpose various "maybes." They say, "maybe" Germany would not want to expand her power in the Western Hemisphere. They say "maybe" Germany would not wish to attack, or interfere with, the interests of the United States. They say "maybe," Germany will give us assurances that she will not, as the phrase is "bother the United States." They say "maybe" the contingency will not arise—maybe Germany won't actually conquer England and France; maybe the war will end in a treaty by which Germany will not undertake to take possession of territory in the Western Hemisphere.

BUT "MAYBE" is wishful thinking. "Maybe" is hardly a sound basis for a national policy. Most Americans would prefer to look the problem in the face, as it stands.

What to do about it? Shall we go down there right away and take possession of those islands and territory, before Germany undertakes to assert her possession? That would entail definite consequences, for that would be in effect an act of war against Germany. Shall we wait until the contingency actually arises, until what lawyers call the "overt act," until Germany actually takes physical possession of those islands? If we wait until then, Germany may act with force. Germany may by that time have conquered Britain, and have possession of the British navy. If Germany thus has a powerful navy, and if we then undertake to prevent her from taking possession of that territory, we will in that case be obliged to do so with our Navy. It will take all our Navy. And with our Navy busy there, what might Japan do in the Pacific?

I have told this problem in terms of a very small example, the tiny possessions of Holland in the West Indies and South America. Exactly the same problem is ahead of us in extremely large terms. What is said about these small Dutch dependencies applies equally to the quite large dependencies of Britain and France in the Western Hemisphere, including Canada. If Britain and France are completely conquered by Germany, Germany will have, over all the British and French portions of the Western Hemisphere, the same rights which today she has over the Holland dependencies.

The inescapable fact is that the United States has an immense interest in seeing that Germany does not conquer England and France. From that inescapable fact arises an inference equally inescapable. Look it in the face, reader.

Darden Urges Summer Session At Naval Academy

Representative Darden (Democrat), of Virginia, member of the House Naval Affairs Committee, urged yesterday that as a part of the defense program that the Naval Academy stay in session through the summer to make possible graduation of the 1941 class in February.

"The pressing need of the Navy for officers would fully justify continuous sessions of the academy through the summer to make possible early graduation of the 1941 class," he said in a statement.

"I realize some vacation is necessary, but the emergency is such to warrant a reduction to the minimum and utilization of every moment in bringing these young men into the service as officers."

Darden said such a move would require no legislation, but would be only an administrative measure.

Editor, Central Bulletin

About fads and fashions at Central High: Girls like the unusual in anything from hair-dos to silver buttons and when such an idea as a jitterbug jacket springs up, just about every girl in school follows suit.

Such old favorites as saddle shoes have been the vogue for years, due to their adaptability to school life. This year a new idea in shoes, "wedgies," has evolved from the minds of the powers-that-be of fashion. At first they didn't seem to appeal to the average student, probably because of their unusual appearance.

Swing skirts and the military influence as illustrated by soldiers' shiny silver buttons are fashions seen more and more in the halls of Central. It cannot be said Central girls don't follow the fashion magazines, for in the recent war months military styles have been featured more than any others.

One of the most outstanding fads at Central, one that opens endless fields of invention, is jewelry. There is no limit to the type of thing a girl will wear on a string around her neck or wrist. Even safety pins and clothespins on chains have found their lot changed from the useful to the decorative. Many fad followers make their own.

Jackets are a slightly more limited field for originality, but jitterbug jackets and their variations may be changed to suit the wearer. Popular is the kind with which the owner starts from scratch, literally, and registers her own bright thoughts. Terry cloth makes interesting short jackets.

When warm weather comes to Washington, "debutante length" hair ceases to be the style with many "Centralites." A much simpler solution of the hair-do problem is to roll it up on a ribbon or band. To the uninitiated male it probably looks a little complicated, but it proves simple after the first few attempts.

Church of the Week

Fifth Baptists to Honor Dr. Briggs, 31 Years Pastor

The Rev. J. Herrick Hall (left), new junior pastor and minister of music, and Dr. John E. Briggs, pastor, look over plans for the reconstruction of the choir facilities

By Robert Tate Allan.

The congregation of Fifth Baptist Church, E near Sixth street southwest, tomorrow will honor its pastor, Dr. John E. Briggs, upon completion of thirty-one years' service.

Members from all parts of Washington and former members from out of town will gather at the 11 o'clock service, when Dr. Briggs will bring his anniversary message, and for the program at 8 p. m., being followed by a congregational reception.

The 102 persons received into church affiliation by Dr. Briggs during the past year also will be accorded special recognition tomorrow night.

Among the foremost clergymen of the Baptist denomination, Dr. Briggs' record of achievement at the local church is outstanding.

He Married 5,000

Since coming to Fifth Church in 1909, he has welcomed 5,198 people to membership, including 2,552 through baptism. He has seen the church enrollment jump to more than 1,400, and helped his parishioners raise $668,549 for all purposes.

During his entire 42-year ministry, he has made more than 30,000 pastoral calls, joined 5,000 in the bonds of matrimony nad officiated at 3,000 baptisms and 3,000 funerals.

While the Southwest section has changed since he arrived, most of the parishioners who moved to other parts of the city still retain membership at Fifth Baptist Church, and attend services regularly. Dr. Briggs feels that loyalty has been one of the most heartening aspects of his pastorate here, especially during the past year, when the congregation has carried on splendidly during his illness.

Building Program

Fortunately, Dr. Briggs' anniversary is coinciding with a recently-begun project of the congregation—the expansion and strengthening of the sacred music facilities, with the acquisition of a full time music director and junior pastor, the Rev. J. Herrick Hall, formerly of New Orelans, La.

The enterprise includes rebuilding and enlarging of the choir loft, lowering it to a level with the pulpit, modernization of the pipe organ, construction of an office for the Rev. Mr. Hall, and other features. The rebuilding cost of $7,000 is being borne through special appeals and regular contributions. Thomas M. Medford is architect for the job.

One of the first things to come to Mr. Hall's attention at Fifth Baptist Church was the fine work being carried on by the four organized Bible classes. They are the Baraca, Philathea, Berean and James groups.

Among the class officials are J. Ellett, James Tune, Mrs. Mattie Snellings, Dr. Briggs, B. F. De Atley, C. C. James and Howard Vincent. James is chairman of the board of deacons and also a church trustee. J. Howard Ingram is Sunday school head.

Walter Price and J. O. James Tune have been members for fifty years, and B. W. Ingram also has a long record of membership. The late J. J. Darlington, eminent lawyer, served for many years as teacher of the Berean class and deacon.

Council Designates 'Day of Prayer'

Washington worshipers will join in the appeal of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America that tomorrow be designated as a "day of prayer, fasting and sacrificial giving in order that we may as a people enter into the suffering of humanity overseas." The appeal was issued May 17.

The special observance, the executive committee of the council says, is to be regarded as "but the preparation for, and the beginning of, a sacrificial effort to meet the needs of those who, though distant, are still our neighbors."

The Methodist and Northern Baptist churches had already designated the day for the purpose. The Federal Council's action is to make the observance more general.

It is expected that offerings will be sent to denominational committees for relief abroad, to the agencies through which churches usually contribute, or to the committee on foreign relief appeals, 297 Fourth avenue, New York City, for allocation. The last-named committee has been set up by the Foreign Missions Conference and the Federal Council to assist the churches with information and to effect a coordination of the various appeals.

BERNARD OF CLAIRVAUX
Jesu! the very thought is sweet
In that dear Name all heart-joys meet;
But sweeter than the honey far
The glimpses of His presence are.
Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS
This familiar hymn, dear to all English-speaking believers, was a devout meditation of Bernard of Clairvaux, a Cistercian monk. For more than thirty years, his personal power guided the religious and political affairs of Europe. His eloquent preaching inspired the second crusade.

Margaret Cary Tuckerman Bows to Society At Brilliant Garden Party at 'Tuxeden' Home

Debutante Is Launched Under the Auspices Of Smiling Skies; Interesting Group of 300, Including Diplomats, Attend Function

THE FIRST HOSTESS on whom the sun has shone for several days, Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman was thanking her lucky stars yesterday afternoon that the debut of her daughter, Margaret Cary, planned as a garden party, turned out to be one. In a month when debutantes have anxiously hoped for clear skies, only to have to shift operations indoors at the last moment, guests at yesterday's reception could enjoy a ramble in the spacious gardens of Tuxeden, the Tuckerman home in Edgemoor, Md.

Mr. and Mrs. Tuckerman and their pretty daughter—she's the youngest of five—received on the lawn against a background of spruce trees and flowering shrubs. The debutante had chosen a billowing frock of white organza, made with a very full skirt, a square neck and sleeves which were puffed to the elbows. She carried two bouquets—one a cluster of pink roses and delphinium sent by her godmother, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers. The other, a nosegay of spring blossoms, was the gift of her parents.

Mrs. Tuckerman was attired in a floor-length gown of gray lace trimmed with a bunch of red roses. The same flowers topped off her black hat and she carried a bouquet of white orchids.

All four of Miss Peggy's older sisters were on hand for the party. They are Mrs. Benjamin Byas, Miss Laura Tuckerman, Miss Ruth Tuckerman and Mrs. Robert Williams, wife of Capt. Williams, of Quantico, Va. Mrs. Williams has been staying at Tuxeden for several days. She and her sisters have all been presented to local society there at big receptions in past seasons.

Tea Table On the Lawn

Since the family has been prominent in Washington circles for many years, Miss Tuckerman's debut drew an interesting group of diplomats, officials and residents. About 300 motored out, and there were also guests from New York, Philadelphia and Virginia.

Long tables spread with tea time delicacies were set out on the lawn. Assisting Miss Tuckerman were a group of debs of this season and last, among them the Misses Yolanda Alfaro, Sheila Broderick, Molly Thompson, Patricia Prochnik, Cynthia Dunn, Zeva Fish, Beth Kean, Eugenia Merrill, Katherine Clement, Sita Finkenstaedt, Mary Lord Andrews, Virginia Watkins and Eleanor Cresson.

Pouring tea and coffee were friends of the debutante's parents. They included Mrs. Charles McNary, wife of the Senator from Oregon, Representative Rogers, Mrs. Frederick Atherton, Miss Janet Fish, Miss Anne Randolph, Coutess de Buyer-Mimeure, Mrs. Edgar Prochnik, Mrs. Lee Phillips, Mrs. Sidney Cloman, Mrs. Thomas Riggs, Mrs. Douglas MacArthur, Mrs. Harry Huse and Mrs. McCeney Werlich, all of Washington.

Assisting Hostesses From Out of Town

Also assisting were Mrs. Ralph Page, Mrs. Clement Biddle and Mrs. Caleb Cresson, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Dorsey Cullen, of New York; Mrs. Bruce Cotten, Mrs. Edward Simpson and Mrs. Tunstall Smith, of Baltimore, and Mrs. Huntington Williams, Mrs. William Bell Watkins and Mrs. Karl Boy-Ed, of Virginia.

The debutante's cousin, Frederic DePeyster, was down from New York for the party. Other New Yorkers present included Mr and Mrs. Alexander Creel, Mrs. Charles Rockwell and the latter's daughter, Princess Diana Eristavi, all of New York.

After the reception the Tuckermans gave a dinner for 90 at Tuxeden—one of the few private homes large enough for such a gathering. Tables set up in the ballroom and dining room were centered with low bowls of roses. Clusters of azalea blossoms had been brought in from the garden and the many bouquets sent the debutante were massed effectively. Sidney's Orchestra played, and between dances the young ladies and their escorts strolled beneath Japanese lanterns in the garden.

Dinners Close Party Program

In addition to her sisters and her assistants Miss Tuckerman's dinner guests included the Misses Louie Stillwell, Beth Kean, Billie Byrd West, Gail Dawley, Lisette Riggs, Eleanor Cresson, Natalie Sutherland and Princess Eristavi, Mr and Mrs. Thomas Adams and the Misses Genevieve Roe, of Greensboro, Md., and Lois May, of Indiana, the two latter classmates of Miss Tuckerman at Cathedral School, were also present.

Guests at Mr. and Mrs. Tuckerman's tables were mostly out-of-towners. The only Washingtonians, except on several "extra men," were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Riggs and Mrs. Thomas Richard Cowell.

Count and Countess Tomacelli, of New York and Philadelphia, cousins of Mrs. Tuckerman, were members of the dinner party. Others included Mr. and Mrs. Dallas McGrew—he is the deb's godfather—Mrs. Biddle, Mrs. Simpson, Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Rockwood.

Party Marks Sec. Woodring's 50th Birthday

Two Large White Cakes Center Table For Buffet Dinner

Two big white cakes, each with 50 yellow candles centered the buffet table at the party which Mrs. Harry H. Woodring gave last night to celebrate the fiftieth birthday of her husband, the Secretary of War.

Mrs. Woodring couldn't find one cake large enough for the 40 guests, so she chose two instead. Piece de resistance of the delicious supper was an enormous salmon, which a friend of the Secretary had sent from the West Coast.

The hostess wore a white crepe dinner dress, made on simple lines with graceful chiffon sleeves, a frock which was particularly becoming to her blonde hair and slender figure. She had rearranged the living room so that every guest could sit down next to a small table after helping himself or herself from the big buffet in the dining room. Vases of large white peonies and yellow gladioli were placed here and there in the Woodring apartment.

McGoverns On Bridal Tour

The couple dispensed with attendants. They left immediately after the ceremony for New York City, whence they will travel to Canada. Upon their return they will live in the Westchester Apartments.

Mr. McGovern attended the University of Florida and George Washington University. He is a member of Phi Delta Theta and is practising law here.

Columbus Medals Bestowed At the Pastorizas' Gay Party

Many Latin Diplomats in Gathering; Honors Award for Work in Behalf Of Dominican Memorial to Discoverer

By Carolyn Bell

Colmbus—yes, the gentleman who sailed the ocen blue in 1492—was responsible for the preponderance of champagne and decorations at the Dominican Legation yesterday afternoon. The Minister and Senora de Pastoriza gathered in a group of friends, for the most part Latin-American diplomats, to honor the members of the National Committee of the United States for the Columbus Memorial Lighthouse and the director general of the Pan American Union, Dr. Leo S. Rowe.

Decorations were in order, for the Dominican government has bestowed the Heraldic Order of Cristobal Colon upon the members of the committee and Dr. Rowe. Decorations, as such, have been lavished upon diplomats of late but these Columbus medals have an especial meaning for the peoples of the Americas. It is hoped that in the very near future the lighthouse "at the cross roads of the Americas" on the shores of the Dominican Republic, will be started.

Hostess' Portrait Over Fireplace

The Pastorizas received in the drawing room of the legation for the second time at a large party since they moved into their new quarters. Amber damask drapes hang at the windows, the color being repeated in the Persian rugs. In front of the fireplace, over which hangs an excellent portrait of Senora de Pastoriza, are two candy-striped love seats in red and white. Red roses were used throughout the room. Senora de Pastoriza selected a brown chiffon frock, printed in green and red.

Following the speech of the Minister the handsome decorations were bestowed. Dr. Ada L. Comstock, president of Radcliffe College, and Dr. Mary Wilhelmine Williams, professor of history at Goucher College, received the orders. Others were T. R. Armstrong, vice president of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, Robert Woods Bliss, former Ambassador to the Argentine; Dr. Edwin M. Borchard, professor of law at Yale University, Joseph P. Grace, Dr. John C. Merriam, Dr. James Brown Scott, secretary of the Carnegie Endowment for International peace, and Dr. Rowe. The other members of the committee were unable to be present for the presentation.

Mrs. Duggan Pours Tea

After the decorations were presented guests gathered in the dining room for tea supplemented by a lavish display of food. The table was centered with red roses. Mrs. Laurence Duggan, who topped her green silk suit with a Panama hat, was pouring at one end while Senora de Recinos, wife of the Minister of Guatemala, served at the other. Pretty Matilda Pastoriza, wearing a dusty crepe frock, assisted her parents, while the two boys, Andres and Tomas were here, there and everywhere.

Striking in a black and white striped bengaline suit was Mrs. Robert Scotten, wife of the newly appointed United States Minister to the Dominican Republic. They will sail on June 13. A brief black and white straw hat with a wisp of a veil completed the ensemble. She chatted with Senora de Vega, wife of the First Secretary of the Dominican Legation, who wore a cluster of white iris pinned to her frock.

The Ambassador of Chile and Senora de Cabero were there, she in a red, white and black ensemble; also the Minister of Nicaragua and Senora de De Bayle, the Minister of Honduras and Senora de Caceras—her white frock was splashed with bright flowers—the Ambassador of Panama and Senora de Boyd, Miss Martha Watts, in gray wool, and Representative Richard Kleberg.

Dr. and Mrs. Gray To Hold Reception

Chancellor and Mrs. Joseph M. M. Gray will receive members of the American University graduating classes, their parents and friends, the faculty, and alumni, this afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock in the Chancellor's residence on the campus.

Receiving with Dr. and Mrs. Gray will be Dr. Frank Collier, professor emeritus of philosophy, with Mrs. Collier; Dr. Delos Kinsman, professor emeritus of economics, with Mrs. Kinsman; Kenneth Hoover, president of the alumni association, with Mrs. Hoover.

The reception will be followed by alumni class dinners, by an informal reception for alumni by the Junior Women's Guild in the Women's Residence Hall at 8:30, and by the College Council dance in the gymnasium at 10.

Mrs. Entezam Is Married To Mr. Horan

Ex-Wife of Persian Diplomat Is Bride Of Newspaperman

The marriage of Mrs. Margaret Hume Entezam to Harold Horan, Washington newspaperman, took place at a quiet ceremony yesterday at Mount Scion, the home of Mrs. Gordon Conway in Carolina County, near Fredericksburg, Va. Thomas C. Valentine, Caroline County marriage commissioner, officiated. Though no announcement of their engagement had been made, rumors of a romance have been current for several months.

The bride wore a red and white foulard frock, a black hat trimmed with red poppies and fox furs. Later she gave a reception at her home here for members of her family and intimate friends.

The daughter of Mrs. Charles Hume, Mrs. Horan is a member of an old Washington family. Her sister is Mrs. C. Willard Hayes, of Bethesda, and she is a cousin of Mrs. Frederick Hitz, of Seven Locks Farm, Bethesda.

Mr. Horan is the son of John Horan, of New York, and the late Mrs. Horan. He attended Fordham University and the Sorbonne in Paris. He was a newspaper correspondent in Rome and Paris before coming to Washington, where he represents a national magazine.

The bride was formerly married to Abdullah Entezam, Persian diplomat. The marriage ended recently in divorce. She has lived abroad in recent years, and spent part of this winter in Florida.

Man Calls His Marriage 'Seven Years of Hell; Wife Blames 'In-Law Interference;' How Save Situation?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: After our marriage, seven years ago, my husband and I both worked, until 1937, when I resigned my job at my husband's insistence. Two years later, our son was born. He is now 16 months old, and every one of these months has been a nightmare. Previously, we had had the usual disagreements which come to all newlyweds, but nothing serious, although occasionally my husband would remind me that I seemed to take him for granted. But as this was untrue, I didn't give such remarks a second thought.

Herein lies my trouble: My husband is the only son, and the youngest, of five children. During his boyhood, he was made to feel that he was the acme of perfection. While his family welcomed me with open arms, it was because I was HIS wife; and since our son came, I have been constantly upset by in-law interference. It has my husband and me constantly at odds.

I have many faults, but saying unkind things without provocation is not one of them. It is hard for me to understand such remarks coming from others; especially from members of his family. When our son was born, one of his sisters, displeased because I wasn't handling the baby to suit her, stormed out of the room, saying, "My goodness, but you certainly are a dumb mother."

On occasions when we have visited his family, his mother has curtly said to me, "You can't go through life with a chip on your shoulder." Is standing on one's own feet going through life with a chip on one's shoulder? I believe that the conscientious performance of the tasks of motherhood requires control, stamina, tolerance and the ability to stand on one's own feet.

After one visit to his family, when one sister had been particularly rude, I said to my husband on the way home, "If your sister talks to me again as she did during this visit, I am going to defend myself, instead of swallowing it." His reply was, "I wouldn't advise you to"—meaning that his family could do and say what they please to me, and I could expect no support from him. . . .

Last night I had to drive in town to buy a gift and on the way home I had a flat tire. I did what I thought he would have done in a similar situation; but he made me feel very stupid and further said I had created unnecessary expense. When I tried to reason with him, he told me to get out and leave him alone. He also said he had "lived seven years of hell." When I asked him to say "yes" or "no" as to whether he loved me, he replied, "I'm beginning to wonder."

I feel I have a good husband. He is considerate in many ways and, so far as I know, he is faithful to me. But I can hardly endure his sulking when things aren't to his liking. I go to bed physically exhausted night after night, not to mention the mental strain. My nerves are on edge, my patience grows thinner daily and (cowardly as it may seem) I have even contemplated suicide.

When I worked, we had a substantial income and everything was fine. He was always in good spirits; he bought me gifts and flowers and we ate dinner out nearly every night. But now, because things cannot be that way, I am blamed for all the misery. My eyes are swollen from much weeping and I am miserable. Please tell me what to do.

SUBURBAN WIFE.

Wife's Self-Pity Seems The Corrosive Element

DEAR S. W.: No man can continue long to love a woman who feels sorry for herself. Self-pity gnaws at the vitals of character and personality until the afflicted individual shrivels by degrees into a repellant caricature of what might have been his "better self."

Your sometime thought of suicide is indicative of—indeed, inspired by—self-pity. It shows how childish is your hurt reaction to your husband's failure to sympathize seriously with your self-commiseration. In thinking of suicide, you are really thinking, "I'll bet he'd be sorry if I died;"—and from there you go on to visualize such a denouement, and to dramatize in mind the terrible remorse that supposedly would be his if you "ended it all."

While I appreciate the sting of your sister-in-law's remark that "you certainly are a dumb mother," I imagine she was only giving you the same rough side of her tongue that she would have presented to one of her own sisters who had exasperated her. While it may not be the Utopian ideal, most large families of children early establish an habitual atmosphere of mutual plain speaking, with no personal affront intended or accepted, and it is likely this girl's bluntness was purely indicative of your acceptance as "one of the family."

While you may never deliberately "say unkind things without provocation," it is obvious that you are flagrantly tactless; as, for instance, when you said to your husband, "If YOUR SISTER talks to me again, etc." Why charge him, by implication, with belonging to the (theoretical) enemy's camp? To do so is to put him immediately and coldly on the defensive. His reaction as described was cued exactly to your resentful, accusatory opening. Better not to speak of such things at all, if you cannot invite a united-front discussion by the self-questioning approach.

In speaking of the "ability to stand on one's own feet" while discharging maternal responsibilities, I imagine you are indirectly defending a certain hands-off policy you have adopted with regard to the rearing of your child. You probably are aggressively and antagonistically on the alert against "in-law interference" in this domain—to the extent, perhaps, that you have curdled an invaluable amount of affection, good will and potential helpfulness into cold dislike.

Plainly, your husband is very weary of trying to keep the peace, both at home and between the two camps. In alluding to his marriage as "seven years of hell" he gives one to wonder if you are not a chronic complainer, expecting constant appeasement and kid-gloved handling. If "everything was fine" when you worked; if he then bought you gifts and flowers and was "always in good spirits," it probably was because your own mood was then more consistently buoyant, as a result of your having few life-size problems to deal with.

You say that "now, because things cannot be that way, I am blamed for all the misery." And probably rightly so. I imagine the misery that makes a nightmare of your marriage had its beginnings in your own bitterness of spirit at having to get down to the brass tacks of domesticity. And I imagine that bitterness has unfolded and "outpictured" itself in all your words and actions, until your husband is not only helpless before it, but increasingly possessed by it—as witness his recent remark that he is "beginning to wonder" whether he even loves you.

How change the picture? Someone has aptly observed, "If you bring a smiling visage to the glass (mirror), you meet a smile." You have been putting a long face at your husband and his family and you are now getting a sour image in return. If the situation can be bettered—before it gets worse—it can only be done by your creating happiness for yourself from the inside out.

You might read Wilfred Rhoades' "The Self You Have to Live With." And you might get a psychiatrist's help in disentangling your corrosive inner conflicts. And you might get medical help in rebuilding your physical strength—although I think your exhaustion is more psychic than organic. Maybe you need to go back to office work and away from the (to you) distasteful drudgery of housework.

It would be better for the child to have a competent nursemaid and congenial parents than the constant care of a pickle-visaged mother who is silently at war with a sulkily martyred father. Out in the world of so-called "affairs" once more, you might find more refreshing food for thought than the mean things your husband and in-laws say and do, and so serenely face such irritants out of existence. What you need, in brief, is a changed bill of mental fare; something more substantial and wholesome than you've been gnawing on for the past few years.

Sun Valley Fashions for Vacationers

Sun Valley's Color Moves Through East

Fashions Different From Usual Styles Of Resort Clothes

The Post Fashion Editor.

AT LAST a little of the brilliant color and movie star glamour of Sun Valley has filtered through to the East. To most of us Sun Valley, Idaho, has sounded as remote as Shangri La, as mythical as authentic data on nylon hose. But now Washington can experience a little of the freshness of Sun Valley fashions because they have been locally interpreted in a series of play clothes for vacation wardrobes.

Marshall Adams

These fashions are delightfully different, both for those lucky enough to be able to ski and ice skate 2,000 miles away from home this summer as well as for those who plan a breezy, colorful wardrobe for only Rehoboth or Virginia Beach. The "Sun Valleys" have the verve of the outdoors in their casual line and their adherence to native design. Containing a section of over a dozen play costumes, the collection relies on aboriginal Indian symbols for inspiration, upon Midwestern sunsets and intense landscapes for color interest.

Summer Ice Skating Togs

There are fishing and beach togs in sailcloth, that hardy cotton washable which requires no pressing, there are ice skating frocks in glaring white pique with swirling skaters' skirts lined in bright calico to contrast with brief white panties. The natives virtually live in these skaters' uniforms, for this is a year-round sport in Sun Valley. For light-hearted play there are entrancingly young pinafore cottons made in wrap-around style and trimmed with ric rac. There are bright terry and calico jackets, which are just as good over the new jersey swim suits with their contrasting midriffs as over the two and three correct little spectator sports frocks included in this collection.

Since there is absolutely no "in-between" dress worn in America's most cosmopolitan year-round playground, the cocktail dress might just as well be left at home. (This might be a good rule for vacationers to abide by at any resort this year.) In place of the usual fancy cocktail-to-dinner costumes, a simple sports classic or dinner pajamas, cleverly draped of jersey and printed silk in delicious color combinations is the new order for summer informality. These are often hooded, worn with massive native jewelry and with high-cut waistbands to make your figure as lean and lithe as a young cowhand's.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

New York, May 31.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Ruth Fay is one of our busiest girls, as active head of one of the biggest and fanciest cosmetic firms, but she has time and the will for fun. Right now she is palling around with four or five Britishers here to install woollen exhibits at their Fair pavilion, she has been inspired to give an old-fashioned "block party" for their entertainment. Near her, on East Fifty-first street, live lots of her chums, so it will be very gala, with lights, flags and villagers dancing on the pave. Great chance for the overseas cousins to wonder at those droll Americans.

Our old chum, the Ranee of Sarawak, seems to like our night life better than the Island of Borneo. A few nights ago the Ranee, all dolled up in her native dress, was seen doing the boomps-a-daisy, that refined dance, with Nick Wall, one of the better jockeys. What a droll spectacle that was, friends!

Doesn't Rajah Brooke want her home, or does he willingly let her fancy roam?

Coming out of the theater the other night with Ruth Fay, Arden's generalissimo, we ran into an enormous Communist demonstration in Times Square which demoralized and pushed into the gutters the usual 11 o'clock crowd. It was made up largely of young and very loud little girls, and the holler of the evening was "No sir, the Yanks aren't coming!" over and over again. This melee rounded out a perfect picture of th heart of New York City on a tense and nervous night. I saw many a man make a fist and want to start socking at the males in the demonstration, but only a few did. Our wonderful, long-suffering cops just shunted the people up side streets, and stopped the show.

Trim Legs for Short Skirts Depend on Muscle Exercise

Sports, Such as Golf and Hiking, Recommended Gym Workouts on Mats Also Effective; Flabbiness and Fat Bad With Hems Going Up

By Ida Jean Kain.

AS LONG as Paris is short on dress materials it will be the style to wear the skirt short. It is what you might call making a fashion of necessity.

The word "short" is always comparative. Skirts are now short at 17 inches from the floor, in comparison with the 14 inches that used to be considered extreme . . . there is no telling where it will all end.

Excellent psychologists, the style dictators will not call attention to the economics of the situation. They will merely point out the smartness of brevity as they continue to clip off the inches. But no matter how smart, short skirts are not becoming unless they are supported by a good pair of legs, and it is no secret that the average run of legs is not what it should be.

Almost Any Sport Helps

The reason is that legs are underexercised. Usually the trouble is not in too much or too little fat, but in the underdevelopment of the muscles. A good musculature gives a trimmer calf and ankle contour to any pair of legs.

Almost any sport affords excellent workouts for these leg muscles. Even tramping over a golf course is good leg work. If the legs are extremely thin, bicycling will develop a nice calf. Or you can acquire lovelier limbs on the exercise mat.

For an excellent leg workout, go into a deep knee bend on toes, then try it with heels flat on floor

Have you ever given this old reliable a fair trial? First, lie on the back on the floor. Then place the hands under the hips for leverage and swing the legs—keeping the knees straight—up and back overhead until the toes rest on the floor. Curl toes toward the instep and swing the legs from the hips in a scissors action for 50 counts. Keep the knees straight and point the heels hard. When you have finished rest for a few minutes before getting back into the same position, this time with the toes pointed, for another 50 counts.

Try Flutter Kick

Very much the same stretching and contracting of the leg muscles is put into practice in swimming. The old flutter kick is a neat leg improver. If you cant' swim worth mentioning, hang on to the rail at the pool or the rope at the beach and kick from the hips, first pointing the toes, then the heels.

For your landlubber days here is another exercise that will hasten the good work. Stand with one hand on the back of a chair and, rising on the toes, go into a deep-knee bend. Repeat very slowly, five times. Rest, then try the same exercise with the heels on the floor.

Feed Dogs Scientifically

PROPER care of a dog is really simple. But it's highly important to avoid common errors, misinformation. Especially dangerous are wrong notions about feeding—that a dog knows instinctively what to eat, that meat makes a dog vicious, that a vegetable diet is "good for him."

Your dog's diet should be carefully planned and a large part should be meat. Far from making him vicious, meat is necessary for your dog's well-being. A lack of meat may even cause fits.

Coffee Flavor Best In Clean Pot

Keep the coffee pot or percolator clean and sweet smelling and see if your coffee doesn't improve. Even though you use a reliable brand and follow the approved directions for coffee making, the slighest trace of sediment clinging to the surface dulls the delicate flavor that distinguish a mediocre beverage from a very special one.

Wash the coffee maker frequently in hot soapsuds, preferably after each use. Use a tiny brush to get inside the spout. Never immerse an electric percolator in water. Fill the inside with soapsuds for washing, then scald it, and wash the outside.

Stuffed Breast of Capon a Distinguished Food

SUMMERTIME in Washington isn't so bad for entertaining, if you look to the lovely spots about the city. One, cool, quiet oasis, resplendent with charm, is the Shoreham Terrace. This delightful out-of-door spot gave a salute to summer at its opening Wednesday night.

A feature of the terrace service is that you may order any flavor of ice cream (other than those listed) and it can be frozen in 1½ minutes. Stuffed Breast of Capon ala Perigord (Truffle Sauce) was my meat choice. This dish to me represents a food in a grand manner. It was accompanied by lima beans combined with thin slices of mushrooms, and Sparkling Burgundy wine.

Whenever you have really distinguished food in a hotel you think how nice it would be to serve this fine fare at your own table. Stuffed Breast of Capon is not difficult to prepare. Following are directions:

Stuffed Breast of Capon

Remove breasts from capons, leave the wing bone attached. Season with salt and pepper, dip in cream, dust lightly with flour. Melt butter in skillet. Saute the breasts lightly in butter and then arrange on a well buttered pan. Dot with butter. Cover with buttered or parchment paper. Bake from 10 to 15 minutes in hot oven, 425 degrees. Baste frequently with fat in pan. The breasts may be served on thin slices of broiled ham. Serve with—

Truffle Sauce—Cook 2 tablespoons minced raw ham, 1 teaspoon minced onion, 1 bay leaf, and 1 blade of mace in 2 cups stock. Boil until reduced ½. Strain and return to heat. Mix 1 tablespoon butter with 1½ tablespoons flour, add to stock. When mixture boils, add ¼ cup minced mushrooms, 1 tablespoon minced truffles, ½ teaspoon salt and dash of pepper. Boil 1 minute, remove from heat and add 1 tablespoon sherry. Makes 1¼ cups.

One Killed, Four Injured In Traffic

Merrifield, Va., Man Dies in Hospital Here After Car Upsets Near Falls Church

One man was killed and four injured in traffic accidents in and near Washington yesterday.

A man, identified as Pomeroy P. Clark, jr., 31, of Merrifield, Va., died in Georgetown Hospital early this morning a few hours after he had been removed from an overturned automobile near Falls Church, Va.

Apparently there were no witnesses of the accident. A. C. Shumate, of the Falls Church police department, saw the upset car lying in the field near the roadside and took Clark to the hospital.

Boy Felled by Cab

Injured persons included a 2-year-old boy.

The child, Ralph E. Lindamond, of 524 Seventh street northeast, was struck by a taxi at Sixth and H streets northeast when he ran away from his mother, who was shopping in a grocery store. He was treated for multiple bruises and possible fracture of the thigh at Casualty Hospital. Operator of the taxi was John J. Chap, 23, of 920 Seventh street northeast.

Struck at Fourteenth street and Maine avenue southwest, John Morjessen, 69, of 610 L street southwest, was treated at Emergency Hospital, for injuries to the legs and brush burns.

G. P. O. Guard Hurt

Thomas M. Fogle, 53, of 2111 Eighteenth street northwest, a guard at the Government Printing Office, suffered a broken nose and possible skull fracture when hit by a streetcar at Eighteenth and U streets northwest.

Six-year-old Milburn Howard, colored, of 68 I street northeast, was treated at Freedmen's Hospital for laceration of the scalp after he was knocked down by an auto near his home.

George Robinson, Ex-Alexandria Alderman, Dies

George H. Robinson, 71, member of the board of aldermen of Alexandria from 1912 to 1916 and a lifelong resident of that city, died yesterday at his residence, 233 N. St. Asaph street, Alexandria.

Mr. Smith was an employe of the United States Shipping Board from 1918 until his retirement in 1934. He previously had been employed by the American Agricultural Chemical Co. and the Virginia Safe Deposit and Insurance Co. He was active in the Alexandria lodge of Elks.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Julia D. Robinson; a son, John P. Robinson; a daughter, Miss Margaret D. Robinson, and a sister, Miss Josephine V. Robinson.

Funeral services have been set tentatively for Monday.

50 Hardy Souls Open Season At Potomac Pool

Braving chilly waters, more than 50 Washingtonians open the season in East Potomac Park pool, which opened at 1 p. m. despite a mercury hovering around 70 degrees.

The temperature will change little today and partly cloudy weather was forecast for today with possible showers in the afternoon.

Admiral Glennon's Funeral Today

Funeral services with full military honors will be held at 11 a. m. today at Fort Myer Chapel for Rear Admiral James Henry Glennon, U. S. N., retired. Rear Admiral Glennon died Thursday at his home at the Westmoreland Apartments at the age of 83.

400 St. Cecilia Students Crown Queen of May After Parade

A procession of nearly 400 students of St. Cecilia's Academy wound under the elms of East Capitol street last night in ceremonies crowning Mary Jane Collins as Queen of the May.

With each student garbed in white, the long procession was headed by two boys bearing the American flag and the flag of the school. There followed the youngest children carrying books, then older girls with bouquets of red, pink and yellow roses. At the end of the procession came senior girls stringing a fern chain entwined with roses.

Loretta Trainor and Mary Leakley were the Queen's attendants. Crown bearer was Billy Boole. Train bearers were Diana Martin, Eleanor Everett and Mary Lou Maddox.

Singing hymns, the parade moved up one side of East Capitol street from Sixth to Seventh street, then returned on the other side of the chapel. A crowd of more than 500 watched the procession.

A sermon was preached by the Rev. M. J. O'Neill, S. S. The crowning of the Blessed Mother by the Queen concluded the ceremonies.

N. J. Official Urges Funds to Build Superhighway

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Trenton, N. J., May 31.—E. Donald Sterner, State highway commissioner, urged Gov. Moore today to appeal to President Roosevelt and Secretary of War Woodring for Federal funds to construct the proposed New Jersey section of the Boston-Washington superhighway on the ground that it is "a military necessity."

Commissioner Sterner, describing New Jersey as the most vulnerable point along the highly industrial North Atlantic seaboard, suggested that the Lincoln highway in this State be constructed through a cooperative plan of the State and Federal governments. Preliminary studies, including definite locations, already have been made in cooperation with the Public Roads Administration, said Sterner, who is chairman of an eight-State committee conducting preliminary investigations.

Census Check To Seek Fire Violations

Oehmann Claims Rooming Houses Kept Number Of Tenants Secret

Census statistics on Washington rooming houses will be studied by Col. John W. Oehmann, District building inspector, for possible violations of the fire-escape laws, it was revealed yesterday.

Col. Oehmann said he had information that "a number" of rooming house operators had concealed the exact number of tenants to census enumerators because of the regulation which requires an individual fire escape where 10 or more persons live above the first floor of the building.

He said he had requested this information on advice of the Federal Budget Bureau.

Meanwhile, officials of the Census Bureau revealed some rooming-house operators had actually concealed the number of tenants living in their houses. This was discovered in a check-back on the 1930 statistics. Census workers covered one large Government building recently and found some 500 persons who had been missed in the house-to-house check. Most of the missing ones, it was stated, were roomers and lodgers.

The building inspector pointed out that any building of three apartments, not including the living quarters of the family, must comply with the fire-escape laws and operate under a District license.

He said he had no idea how many such violations will be revealed by the census officials.

"If the violations run in the thousands I won't be able to make the inspections anyway with my limited staff," he said.

Roosevelt Asks Additions to Two Military Buildings

President Roosevelt yesterday asked Congress for $1,060,000 for the Federal Works Agency to construct an additional story on two wings of the Navy Building and on seven wings of the Munitions Building in anticipation of an expansion in civil personnel.

The President pointed out that on May 10 he had asked $445,000 for the construction "penthouse" additions on four other wings of the Navy Building. The effect of the second project will be to provide a fourth story for most of the two buildings.

The "rapid development in the National defense program" was cited as a reason for the second request. The President pointed out that it would be difficult to rent the additional office space in Washington and the cost of the improvements would be liquidated within three years through rent savings.

The new quarters will be completed within six months of the time the money is made available.

Gardening Is Fast Becoming Fashionable As Community Farmerettes Go Outdoors

Gardening has become the favorite outdoor sport at Buckingham Community, apartment village in nearby Arlington County, Va.

Almost any day groups of farmerettes may be seen at work on the community's 4-acre farm tract, which has been divided into family garden plots, 20 feet square.

L. S. Kettell, community manager, said the fad had become so popular that 190 garden plots had been laid out this year. This is an increase of 160 over last year when the gardens were started.

The community prepares the ground for cultivation and then ropes off the individual plots. Both flowers and vegetables are grown.

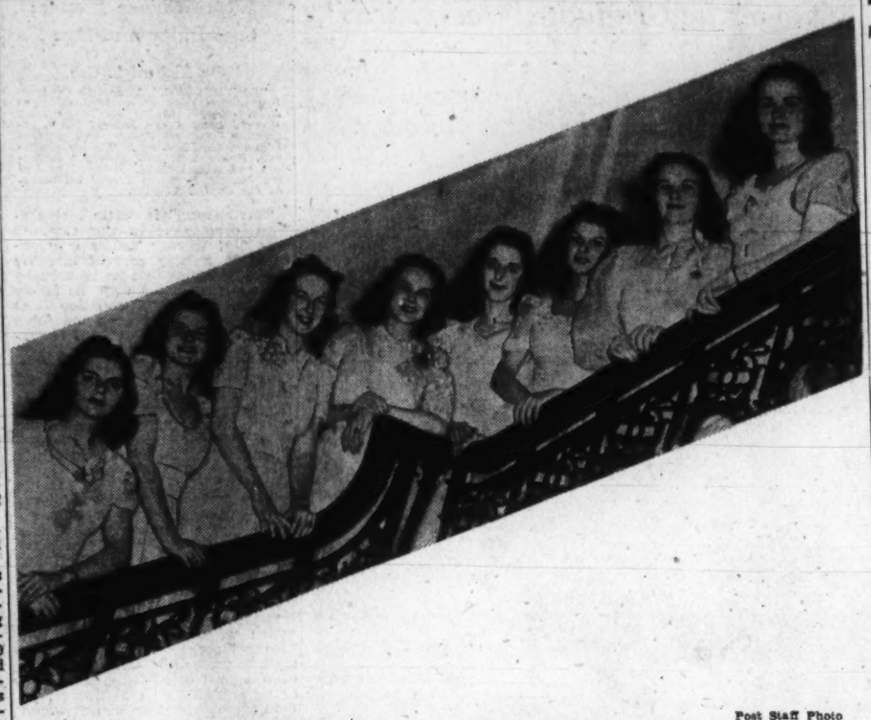

"When the gardens were opened this year," Kettell said, "it resembled an Oklahoma land rush. As fast as we could rope off a plot one of the residents would stake out his claim. We even had a few claim-jumpers."

No charge is made for the garden plots, but the gardeners have to promise to keep the weeds out at least, Kettel said.

The only real problem so far arose recently, Kettell said, when several residents complained that their plots were submerged by the heavy rains this spring, making it impossible to grow the usual flowers and vegetables.

"The only thing I could suggest," Kettell said, "was that they plant rice."

32 to Receive Degrees Today At Gallaudet

Graduation Rites Will Be Held in The College Chapel

A group of 26 deaf and six non-deaf students will receive degrees at Gallaudet College graduation exercises at 4 p. m. today in the college chapel, Florida avenue and Seventh street northeast.

Half of the deaf graduates have already selected their occupations or arranged for graduate study, School President Percival Hull said last night. Claxton Hess and Harold Domich will try commercial printing. Rin-Tin-Tin Kin, Canine Aristocrat, Missing Two Days

Rex is lost.

Rex, aristocrat of Washington dogdom, cousin of the famous Rin-tin-tin, grandson of movie actor Strongheart and a former Hollywood actor in his own right, has been missing for two days from his home at 4210 Jenifer street northwest, it was learned yesterday.

His friend and master, William H. Baldwin, described the dog as a 6-year-old thoroughbred German police, tan and black and highly trained.

Rex began his professional career at the age of 3 weeks, when he was a Hollywood extra, working with his mother in a dog picture. By the time he was five weeks old he was playing leading pup. It was then that Baldwin acquired the dog and brought him to Washington, where he continued Rex's training.

Comes Home With Gift, Finds Wife Dead

Ill, She Ended Life; Husband Had Bought Dresses to Cheer Her

Ignatius G. Hanley, United States Geological Survey lithographer, stopped by a shop on the way home from work yesterday and bought a couple of dresses for his wife, Virginia, 31. She had been ill, and he thought a surprise like that might cheer her up.

When he arrived at 1412 A street southeast, their home, Mrs. Hanley and their daughter, Peggy, 10, seemed to be out. Then he opened the bathroom door.

Lying on the floor, one of his neckties knotted tightly about her throat, was his wife. She was dead.

There was a note to him and Peggy, which said she couldn't stand the pain of her illness any longer. It said she was sorry.

Ford Co. Assails NLRB Charge That It Used 'Thugs'

The Ford Motor Co., accused by a Labor Board trial examiner of using "thugs" to discourage unionization of its employes at Dallas, Tex., retorted yesterday that the charge was "inflammatory" and unsupported by evidence.

The company filed formal exceptions with the board to the examiner's intermediate report, which had recommended that the Dallas Ford plant reinstate two employes, and that the company post notices in all its plants that workers were free to join any labor organization.

It was not granted a "full and fair hearing," the company said, during the month the board's agent conducted a hearing in Dallas on allegations that a so-called strong arm squad had beaten union organizers.

A finding by the examiner that the company had gathered at the Dallas plant the "most brutal, vicious and conscienceless thugs in its employ" the company asserted, was unsupported by any evidence that the alleged acts of violence were committed by the authority and direction of the company.

Air Hostesses Have Their Innings In 'Flight Angels,' at the Earle

Commercial Flying Provides Background Of Aerial Romance; Varied Stage Bill

"FLIGHT ANGELS." Warner Brothers picturization of an original story by Jerry Wald and Richard Macauley, adapted to the screen by Maurice Leo, featuring Virginia Bruce, Dennis Morgan, Wayne Morris, Ralph Bellamy and Jane Wyman, with John Litel, Margot Stevenson, Dorothea Kent, John Ridgely, Lucile Fairbanks, Maris Wrixon, Jane Clayton, Marilyn Merrick, Phyllis Hamilton, Carol Hughes, Mary Anderson, DeWolf Hopper, Ferris Taylor, Dick Elliott, John Arledge and others. Directed by Lewis Seiler. Reviewed Friday morning. At the Earle Theater.

Although the airports, hangars, ships and a complete airline personnel are at its disposal, "Flight Angels," the new screen attraction at the Earle, seems to encounter heavy headwinds in attempting to locate satisfactory terminal facilities. The difficulty seems to be in determining whether it is primarily a film dedicated to the stewardesses in commercial aviation, the romances of two of the "Dodo Birds," the test flight of a new stratosphere plane or the professional and private perplexities of an ace pilot, "grounded" by his company as a result of faulty eyesight. Insofar as dramatic continuity is concerned, it is a dead heat.

BELL

The film play is one of those ostensibly quick-sparking things that depends upon fast action and glib dialogue for its major claim to attention as light and stereotyped entertainment. The plot has both overtones and undertones of many of the aviation pictures that have preceded this one and the dialogue embodies a surplusage of "wisequackery" that has been heard so many times before that it sounds very year-before-last.

Virginia Bruce and Jane Wyman, efficiently assisted by Margot Stevenson, Dorothea Kent, Lucile Fairbanks and a whole squadron of air "hostesses," bear the major feminine load. Miss Bruce plays with agreeable restraint, to balance the more ebullient performances contributed by Jane Wyman and Dorothea Kent. Miss Wyman barges through the action with a fervor that largely sparks the feminine chapters of the story and the fluffy-haired Miss Kent runs her a close second as an ingenuous "dud," whose ministrations to her male passengers bring her out on top with a square-cut diamond engagement ring. It is impossible to keep track of all the "pretties" who participate in the dormitory scenes on the flying fields, there are that many of them.

Dennis Morgan, as the demoted flier, tops the male cast, with Wayne Morris and Ralph Bellamy backing him up ably enough in less expanded roles. John Litel, who must have been reminded of "Ceiling Zero," in which he appeared on the stage, is cast as the doctor, who comes to Miss Bruce's rescue when a baby is born aboard her plane and later sets her husband down because he can't see across the room. All do better with their parts than the authors did.

The "Hip-Hip-Hooray" stage revue contrived by Harry Anger cashes in on the talents of Don Rice, master of ceremonies, monologist and comedian; the Four Sidneys, three girls and a man, in a series of bicycle and unicycle stunts that are harder than they make them appear; Jimmy and Mildred Mulcay, among the best of the harmonica virtuosi; Zoska and Ginger Harmon, "swing" singer with dynamo attachments. The Roxyettes are in there, too, but not quite so conspicuously as usual. Eileen Ritter, with her roaming microphone, pumped up vast enthusiasm with her community sing, which yesterday moved up into the loge for double effectiveness.

"Cinderella's Feller," a Technicolor short subject, played almost entirely by juveniles, and the Paramount News complete a bill that overflow crowds gave a rousing reception at yesterday's first performance. It seemed to me they slightly overestimated it all.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, May 31.

FINANCE: Last week, by a decision rendered in the Court of Appeals, a judgment of more than $300,000 was awarded to William S. Hart, in his case against United Artists. The final sum, including costs, amounted to $304,589.49 . . . Tuesday United Artists sent the check, in payment of this judgment, to Hart's lawyers, the firm of House, Grossman, Vorhaus & Hemley. The check was for $304,581.24. The defendants added a note, explaining that the item to which they objected was the $8.25 tax for the execution to the sheriff, because no execution actually had been issued.

RETURN: When the news broke in Washington, that Roosevelt had appointed Sumner Pike to the SEC, one of those surprised was Judge Haley, the SEC commissioner . . . Pike is from Maine, and Haley from Vermont . . . "The President must be taking Gracie Allen seriously," said Haley. "He has taken Maine and Vermont back into the Republic."

ENTERPRISE: One of the newest major cafes in the night-club circuit is the Club Bali, which opened recently in Philadelphia. It is owned by the three Kaliner brothers—one of whom also owns the drug store on the same corner of the street . . . When a host of cafe patrons lined up in the street, waiting to enter, Kaliner arrived and beamed at this pleasant scene. Then he pointed to the pharmacy he owns, and told the waiting patrons: "I beg your pardon, ladies and gentlemen—but there's a terrific sale on tooth-paste at the corner drug store."

DEFEAT: Peter Arno signed a contract with Simon & Schuster, to write a book called "Where are the Customers Yachts (A good hard look at Wall Street") . . . Although the book was to have been ready for publication now, Arno had done nothing about it. His publishers questioned him about it, and Arno confessed: "A funny book about Wall Street is not what the world is clamoring for now."

MISTAKE: Adm. Clark H. Woodward, head of the Brooklyn Navy Yard, took James T. Farrell, jr., president of the American South African Line, to the Bossert arine roof, to show him the view. The admiral was pleased to discover so many smiling faces around him, particularly in a day of crisis. He learned quickly the reason for those smiles, and rectified the matter forthwith. For the admiral was wearing a cap marked "purser," the cap belonging to the Bossert's elevator starter.

CHATTER: Max Gordon is recuperating at the Regent Nursing Home . . . Martin Dies is writing a book for Dodd, Mead—to be called "The Trojan Horse in America" . . . Sally Rand is telling reporters in Mexico City that she intends to make her permanent residence there. . . . Mrs. Jack Dempsey, who will go to Florida for her divorce, will live at the Dempsey-Vanderbilt Hotel there . . . Mayor LaGuardia, who has been mentioned for appointment as Secretary of War, feels that this post and the job of Secretary of Navy, should be one . . . Edmond O'Brien, who grew a beard for his Mercutio role in "Romeo & Juliet," attended the RKO convention Tuesday and arrived before the clean-shaven Orson Welles did. Ned Depinet, RKO's vice president, then cleared all doubts for the assembled exhibitors, by identifying each: "This is O'Brien, and this is Welles."

RELIEF: Leon Henderson, who was designated by the President to be one of seven defense coordinators, in charge of price stabilization, was asked to relate what his contribution will be . . . "All I can say right now," said Henderson, "is that this is a boon to the country—

Capitol Goes Metaphysical In 'Earthbound'

Andrea Leeds Costars With Warner Baxter; Cass Daley on Stage

By Richard L. Coe

"EARTHBOUND." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story by Basil King, adapted to the screen by John Howard Lawson and Samuel Engel, costarring Warner Baxter and Andrea Leeds, with Lynn Bari, Charley Grapewin, Henry Wilcoxon, Elizabeth Patterson and Russel Hicks. Directed by Irving Pichel. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Capitol Theater.

"Earthbound" is pretty metaphysical drammer. In the Capitol's new film Warner Baxter is implicated in a hazy sort of morality which demands that he be seen by the audience but not by his fellow players, a trying situation that makes Baxter bounce up and down every so often in perplexed annoyance.

That Vesta of the Shambles, Cass Daley is the stage headliner, still her incredible, delirious self, roaring in that unbelievable voice of "ants in her pants" and stopping the show with her shy, reticent comedy.

What "Earthbound" apparently seeks to point out is that few of us are what we seem and that the camera is a remarkably resourceful instrument. The first is essayed by a story of a woman scorned, how she meted out murder to the man who repelled her advances, and how, in death, he proved her guilt. The second reveals again those tricks of transparency and ghostly illusion which were so refreshing in the "Topper" series. Because audiences seem to prefer to giggle at the sight of a man passing through a door or reaching through a glass rather than sympathize with him, it would seem that this supernatural technique is better adapted to comedy than to the serious side of life, or rather death.

A Woman's Revenge

Alone on their Swiss mountain top, Baxter and Andrea Leeds happily celebrate five years of married life and pledge each other to many more. He is called back to Paris to attend to some of his charitable business (Americans in Europe are invariably rich!) But in reality he has been hoaxed by the wife of his best friend, a blushless female with whom he once regrettably carried on an affair. However, he has no use for her now. After she has killed him and placed the blame on her self-sacrificing husband, Baxter can't rest until by some vague force he unveils the truth of his past offences and her wretched crime.

He is wheedled along in this by an omniscient gent in a black cloak who can whip a crisp sandwich from his person with marvelous ease, though for no obvious reason. Miss Leeds is the wife and has the annoying duty of being an apparently cogent cosmopolite who in Paris continually refers to the Riviera as "the south of France" and as if it were somewhere in the Antarctic. Lynn Bari is properly hateful as the menace.

The Juvelys Score

On the stage, the volatile Miss Daley is supported by those amazing Juvelys, who balance on the impossible. Carroll and Howe indulge in cross talk and Helene Denizon offers a ballet impression of a tennis star. The Rhythm Rockets go through a variety of routines, one of which introduces the ballroom dancing of St. Clair and Day. Sam Jack Kaufman trusts all his boys in the orchestra with solos to the enthusiastic response of the house and genial Art Brown is at the organ to make the audience give out in song. A Lowell Thomas visit to the Dutch East Indies, a color cartoon and the Fox Movietone News complete the bill.

Young Actor Defers to Stone

Lewis Stone rode with the Visitadores in their annual visits to ranches above Santa Barbara, through the courtesy of Robert Young. Both had planned to join the 400 horsemen from all over the country for the ride when production began on "One Came Home."

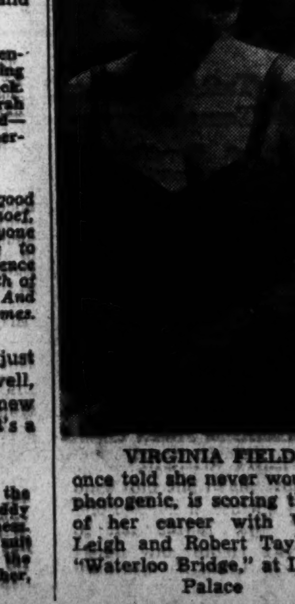

Director S. Sylvan Simon figured his schedule. "I can let one of you go while I make scenes with the other," he suggested.

"Mr. Stone has ridden with the Visitadores for years," insisted Young, "while I'm a new rider. So I'll stay here and work."

Reasons to Practice

William Holden, star of "Those Were the Days" (at good old Siwash), is practicing with his new big game rifle as much to harden his shoulder to its kick as to improve his marksmanship before going on a hunting trip to Mexico.

'Jenny Lind Of the Ozarks' Fooled Gotham

Judy Canova, Fresh From Florida, Made Hit as 'Hillbilly'

By Frederick C. Othman
United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, May 31.—Miss Judy Canova, billed by the Hollywood press agents as "the Jenny Lind of the Ozarks," went to work today as the star of a cinema epic entitled "Scatterbrain."

She announced simultaneously that if she ever gets time she intends to visit Arkansas and give the Ozarks a look. She said she'd read about them and understood they were right nice hills.

If anybody's scatterbrained, it's not Judy. Ten years ago she, her brother, Zeke, and her sister, Ann, were singing hill-billy songs for a radio station in their native Jacksonville, Fla. They knew about these ditties because they'd spent most of their childhood vacations with the hill folk of North Carolina.

Fooled New York

"And so we got up an act," Miss Canova continued, "with my other brother, Pete, as manager. We went to New York and got us a job at a cabaret called the Village Barn. We had on our hill-billy costumes and those folks certainly were fooled. Some of 'em thought we never had seen a train. I guess they thought we walked up from Florida.

"So one night Mr. Rudy Vallee dropped in and saw us. He invited us over to his night club for a dinner and while I was there a lady with a lorgnette—she looked like death warmed over—listened to me yodel. When I finished she said, 'My deah, did you learn to yodel in Switzerland?' I said, 'Well, if Switzerland is in Georgia, I reckon so.' And she turned to her man and said, 'Quaint!'"

The New Yorkers eventually caught on that Judy and family were dumb, like so many Florida foxes. They appeared on numerous radio programs, notably Paul Whiteman's, toured the country in RKO vaudeville and even went to London.

Old Stuff in London

"We sang in the classiest night club there," Judy said, "and I got my big surprise when one of the people told me the song I learned in North Carolina first had been played in England 300 years ago."

In 1936 and 1937 Hollywood got its clutches on Judy and had her enliven such films as "Artists and Models" and "Thrill of a Life Time." She was one of the leading players last year on Broadway in "Yokel Boy" and again the Hollywoodians were fluttering contracts under her nose.

"But I came here to Republic because they gave me the chance to be head lady," she said, while a hairdresser struggled with her hip-long locks, and such fellow performers as Alan Mowbray, Wally Ford, Isabel Jewel and Billy Gilbert fidgeted.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

(While Louella O. Parsons is on her Honolulu vacation, this column is being written by her daughter, Harriett Parsons, producer of "Screen Snapshots.")

Hollywood, May 31 (INS).—Barbara Stanwyck wins the femme lead in Frank Capra's "The Life of John Doe"—and maybe you think that doesn't make her the envy of every actress in town! At least six top stars tested for and wanted the part of Miss Average Girl opposite Gary Cooper's John Doe. Frank just decided today to give it to Mrs. R. Taylor and now that she's set the picture is due to get under way July 1.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Interesting that Capra has played a very important part in the careers of both Barbara and Gary. He gave Barbara one of her first good pictures in "Forbidden" and the hypo he administered to big Coop's waning popularity with "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" is history.

After the preview of "Four Sons," early in the week, the Hollywood press went into a unanimous rave over Eugenie Leontovich's performance, which must have handed her a particular kick in view of the number of studio turndowns she had before T. C. F. signed her. Now Darryl Zanuck has purchased a starring vehicle for her in which she'll again play a mother. Titled "We Who Gave," it was written by Esther Washburn, New York newspaperwoman, who is a Gold Star mother herself. Story is a psychological study of a woman who has to find a way to support her children when her husband is killed. Mary Beth Hughes and Alan Curtis, who were both in "Four Sons" will also have prominent roles in "We Who Gave."

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Annie Sheridan is burned over those items coupling her with George Raft. The only George she's interested in right now is Brent; maybe Sandy Cummings made that rush plane trip to New York in vain, because since Alice Faye got back from the East Wednesday she's been intimating to friends that she won't turn a deaf ear to any reconciliation pleas from Tony Martin. Tony's due here in about a month; Loretta Young is pretty sick with a throat infection; and Gene Raymond is back home from the Good Samaritan after a sinus operation.

George Raft's shadow, Mack Gray, has been promised a role in Capra's "Doe" and is so impressed he's trying to enroll in Madame Ouspenskaya's dramatic school to prepare himself; Ouida Rathbone aiding Pat Paterson Boyer, who is chairman of the American Friends of France, to raise funds for Anne Morgan's splendid relief work among refugees in France. They're trying to raise enough money to buy three ambulances and help pay the nurses' salaries; Harry Warner is said to be buying and equipping 20 ambulances for the Allies; John Howard leaves any moment for Birmingham, Ala., to see former air hostess Wanda McKay. She used to be tagged queen of the air hostesses.

Maggie Lindsay (who throws things at me when I call her that) has bought a new house off Doheny Drive; Announcer Ted Osborn, who has a role in "Charlie Chan at the Wax Museum," will be married at 5 p. m. today at Chapman Park chapel to Kay Phillips. She's been his best girl for 5 years; Tommy Warner, jr., who headed that convoy of eight planes—same one Jackie Coogan and Rog Pryor were with—telling the bunch at Frank Kerwin's merry-go-round about Jackie's narrow escape; Pryor, who also made a successful forced landing, was celebrating his good luck with Frau Ann Sothern and Dick Foran at N. T. G.'s Florentine Gardens.

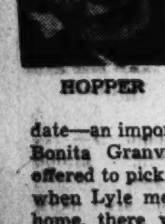

That's all for today said she with a sigh of relief.

In Hollywood

Hollywood, May 31.

A. C. Lyle, who works at Paramount, knows there's a Santa. Lyle used to usher in a theater in Jacksonville, Florida, and Gail Patrick was instrumental in getting him to come to Hollywood. Gail hasn't forgotten. Last Friday was Lyle's birthday and he had a date—an important one (with Bonita Granville)—so Gail offered to pick up Bonita, and when Lyle met her at Gail's home, there was a birthday party, with trimmings, presents, cake and a check!

HOPPER

And Y. Frank Freeman, head of that studio, doesn't forget either. When I dined at Joan Bennett's, we had some Tennessee ham, which Mr. Freeman had sent her. He promised me one. Now there are two hams in the Hopper household—and I assure you, Mr. Freeman's, from Tennessee is better.

Jeffrey Lynn, when he got his first look at little Ann Gillis, of "Tom Sawyer," all dressed up in her first high heels, sweeping dress and fur jacket, said "Gee whiz! Wonder if I'm getting the wrong girl in this picture, when I get Olivia de Havilland."

Jean Cagney, Jimmy's sister, never drinks anything stronger than coffee, so Charlie Ruggles has been showing her how to work up a terrific binge on Coca-Cola.

"What's this I hear about "Killer" Mack Gray trying to get into Maria Ouspenskaya's school of dramatic art. Doesn't seem quite the place for George Raft's bodyguard, but Frank Capra has promised him a bit in his next picture, and "Killer" thinks he should learn something about acting.

Paulette Goddard was honeymooning in Mexico—not hers, but her mother's—and the new groom is W. S. Fleming.

Adolphe Menjou, one of the canniest businessmen in town, had been trying to sell his 25-room mansion for a year, and succeeded the day before the Nazis marched into Holland and Belgium.

In the old picture days, Menjou used to insist upon being paid in cash instead of by check. Going back still farther, Sarah Bernhardt got her fee in gold—before, not after each performance.

And speaking of luck and good business, Newell Vanderhoef, who's found homes for everyone from the Sidney Howards to Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier, has sold $200,000 worth of homes in the last 12 weeks. And then people talk about hard times.

Margaret Lindsay just bought one through Newell, and is like a kid with a new toy. I can't blame her—it's a beauty.

Beautiful Anita Louise, the day after she married Buddy Adler, was called as a witness. So was her mother—in a suit for alimony brought by the former wife of her stepfather, Mr. Whitehead.

Somewhere in Time's memory of deeds unselfishly done, a place should be reserved for Frank Strafaci, the Italian lad who surrendered his place in the National Open that a better golfer might have a shot at the most coveted of fall titles.

POVICH

Let's reconstruct the circumstances briefly. Strafaci was one of the 17 golfers who qualified for next week's Open at Cleveland in the New York sectional trials. His score of 149 got him under the wire. Ben Hogan did not qualify. Hogan's putting touch deserted him strangely and his 150 card was not good enough. To Hogan, to the U. S. G. A. and to the Nation's golf fans it was a jolt.

Hogan was to be the big drawing card of the Cleveland tournament. Bantam Ben Hogan—the Mighty Atom—was the most picturesque golfer to break into big name ranks in years. A 130-pound tyke, he was outdriving the mastodons. Only a week before, he had won the Goodall Round Robin tournament in New York, beating the same master golfers he would have to face in the Open. He had won three straight winter tournaments and was leading all the pros in prize money captured.

This, then, was the drawing card lost to the Open. But not for long did the disappointment reign. Within an hour, young Strafaci, the lowest of the qualifiers stepped forward with the grand gesture. He was withdrawing, he said, to create a place in the Open for Hogan. "I'm not good enough to win it and Hogan is," he said simply.

That was decent of Strafaci, not to say generous and self-effacing. But it was not exactly unparalleled. Down through the years there have been high marks of sportsmanship that compare with it. The heat of battle has produced many a magnificent gesture and, as you may have guessed, we are reminded of a few.

Unforgettable in the memory of this department is an incident we observed at the Penn Relays in the early 1920's when Jimmy Connolly was Georgetown's star miler and, in fact the mile champion of intercollegiate ranks. His duel with Larry Shields, of Penn State, was to be the feature of the Relays at Franklin Field.

To say it tritely, it was a thriller. Head and head, Connolly and Shields were running beyond the half-mile mark when Shields made a bid to spurt into the lead rounding the turn. Cutting over in front of Connolly, he caused the Georgetown runner to break stride and stumble. It was not a flagrant foul and as Connolly went down, Shields apparently had the race won, with a 20-yard lead and little more than a quarter mile to go.

Of a sudden, Shields stopped and waited for Connolly to catch up with him. He even permitted Connolly to take the rail. From what point they renewed their race. The best man was to win it. The best man that day was Shields and no race winner at Franklin Field was ever greeted with as loud a roar of approval as was Shields when he crossed the line ahead of Connolly in the sprint to the tape.

Baseball can qualify for mention in high grade sportsmanship on several counts, but the incident that will live with us concerns Joe Kuhel's broken leg suffered in the 1933 season. He broke his leg sliding into second base at Griffith Stadium. It was a sacrifice. Mickey Cochrane's wide throw had drawn Charley Gehringer into Kuhel's path and to save Gehringer from a nasty spiking, Kuhel slid in awkward fashion. His leg cracked beneath him.

How about that day in Griffith Stadium 20-odd years ago when Eddie Plank, then with the Browns, was bidding for a no-hit game with two out in the ninth? In all his long service with the Athletics, Plank had never pitched a no-hitter. But this day he was on the threshold. Only one more out to negotiate.

The late Eddie Foster, no slugger, was coming to bat for Washington. Manager Clark Griffith was coaching at first base. "Shall I try to spoil his no-hitter?" Faster asked. "Sure," said Griffith with a wink, and he handed Foster a fungo bat to take to the plate. "Knock the ball out of the park," said Griffith, knowing full well that Foster figured to get no hit swinging a fungo.

Foster, of course, did not hit the ball out of the park. But to his great surprise and disgust, he did lift a measly pop fly over the first baseman's head for an unintended hit that spoiled Plank's bid for fame.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, May 31.—Reeling around:

Unless England can come up soon with a good relief pitcher, the industry of sports will be seriously affected in this country. The tragic day when (and if) the remnants of the British fleet brings over the royal family and they make Ottawa the capital of the British Empire, sports will have begun to bite the dust.

CONSIDINE

A poignant little item came over the Transatlantic cables the other day. It said the annual Wimbledon tournament had been postponed from late June to late July. Late July may find only horrid waste and death and ruins where now stands the great center court, and the flag-draped box where the queen mother for so many years has sat receiving the bows of the Tildens, Lacostes, Borotras, Vineses and Budges.

If the British fall back to Canada, and that guy comes over to finish them off this summer, our baseball, tennis, golf, swimming and early football are going to have a tough time existing. At least in their present form.

Back in 1918 the war was more than 3,000 miles away, but only one man saved organized baseball from being shut down July 4 of that year. He was Clark Griffith, the colorful old boy who runs the Washington Senators. He got a reprieve for the game, thus saving the owners hundreds of thousands of dollars and giving millions of his fellow Americans a daily chance to think of something pleasanter than the Argonne.

Griff worked it with a personal appeal to Secretary of War Newton D. Baker. But he was shrewder than to risk everything on a straight appeal. He formed a drilling unit on his team—with drills before each game. Other big league clubs took it up, and in some cases there were drilling competitions between clubs, with army men as judges. The players used bats as drill guns. Atop this, Griff collected thousands of bats, balls and gloves and shipped them to the A. E. F.

His winning argument was that baseball offered a fine physical training for its players, and that the stars would keep in better shape in the ball yards than they would in the Army camps. Baker and his board of Army brass-hats decided to let baseball continue until Labor Day.

Today—Looking at the fearsome front pages—we wonder if it will last until Labor Day, 1940.

If anyone's sap enough to doubt the honesty of baseball, just let him look at the result of the Memorial Day double-header at Brooklyn. Never has a town wanted a winner as much as Brooklyn. Thousands literally beat their fists on the locked gates of the park, after every seat and every foot of standing room was sold. And when the first Giant rolled out the cheer that went up was ear-splitting. So what? So Hubbell pitches a 1-hitter to humiliate the Dodgers in the first game, and in the second—with the stage set for a Dodger victory in the extra innings—the Giants scored eight runs in the twelfth to climax the day.

Do you know how baseball "gates" are split? The baseball offices somehow seem a little reluctant to discuss these matters, and the split-ups vary in the two leagues. But in the American League the visiting club gets 30 cents of every grandstand and box seat ticket and 20 cents of every bleacher ticket. The "gate" at the Yankee Stadium in New York Memorial Day was $79,139.52—for there were 52,437 persons in the house and the average admission price at the stadium is 96 cents, when all the seats are taken. The Boston share amounted to a little under $25,000. Judge Landis' office got $4,121.85—or a nickel on every ticket sold.

Nats, Tigers Open Here Today

On a railroad dining car en route from the North where they had lost five out of six games during the week, the Nats were evincing no loss of appetite. At the club's expense, they were dining handsomely.

A newspaper correspondent with the club was attempting to make his order heard to the waiter above the rattle and roar of the train. "Will it be a steak?" the waiter was asking loudly. "We also have some nice duck and a choice lobster."

"Duck!" shouted the patron.

Bucky Harris' pitching staff has been the Nats' chief handicap since the outset of the season, it has long been apparent. The most recent display of ineffectiveness was the failure to hold a 5-1 lead on Decoration Day at Philadelphia. Three defeats in their last eight games are directly traceable to the absence of a capable relief hurler.

Dutch Leonard alone has proven a consistent winner, although he was the victim of a 2-1 game at Yankee Stadium. Ken Chase has failed to go the route in his last two starts and Harris flatly refuses

Turner to Stage 'Mixed Bout' on June 17

Puerto Rica's Cocoa Kid to Meet Mamakos-Furr Winner Here

Washington's boxing history will take a new turn on the night of June 17, when a white boxer will oppose a colored opponent in a bout sanctioned by the District Boxing Commission.

The District Boxing Commission, in a meeting that lasted only ten minutes, gave their sanction to the match, Commission Secretary Heinie Miller announced.

Vote Is Unanimous

"It was a unanimous vote," said Miller. "The Commission saw no reason why such a match should not be licensed. They pointed out that no law forbade bouts between white and colored boxers. It was the first time application for such a match had been made to the Commission."

The Cocoa Kid is rated by the National Boxing Association, with which the District Commission is affiliated, as the No. 1 challenger for the world's welterweight title held by Henry Armstrong, also colored. He is also rated the No. 1 challenger by the Ring Magazine.

"Cocoa Kid's standing in the welterweight division undoubtedly influenced the Commission's decision," said Miller. "They saw no reason to deprive Washington fans of an opportunity to see the better fighters."

Despite the fact that boxing in Washington has been legalized since 1934, no promoter ever applied for permission to stage a mixed match until Turner went before the commission. "There never has been any rule against mixed matches, the commission simply acts on each application as it is received."

Armstrong May Fight Here

With the precedent once established, the appearance of colored fighters in the Capital will be more frequent, Miller hinted. He said that there was a distinct possibility that Henry Armstrong would defend his title here against a white fighter and that a title defense by Joe Louis in Washington was not far-fetched.

If Mamakos is the winner of Monday night's fight against Furr and thus qualifies for the Cocoa Kid match, it will not be the first time he has met the Negro. A year ago he met Cocoa Kid in Baltimore, losing a decision.

Worthowning Wins Race for Allen Stable; Is Senator Bob Reynolds Face Crimson?

Congressman Refused Opponent's Horse As Gift in March

Worthowning, a five-year-old gelding which Senator Bob Reynolds, of North Carolina did not consider worth owning last March, was worth owning yesterday.

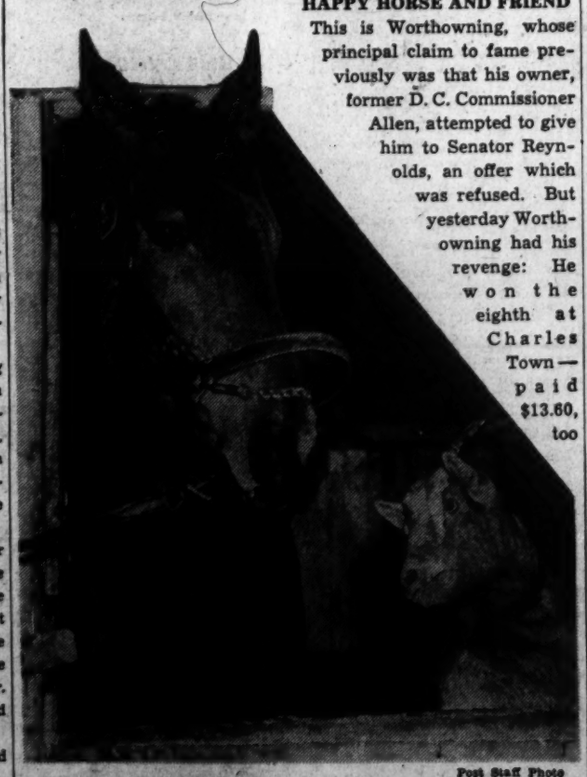

Even as a gift, Worthowning was not worth owning, said Senator Reynolds three months ago when offered the horse at that time by George Allen, then District Commissioner.

At that time, during a hearing on the legalization of racing in Washington, a bill which he opposed, Allen admitted that he did, nevertheless, own a race horse. "In fact," said Allen to Senator Reynolds, "I would be glad to give the horse to you."

To the Benning stables, Senator Reynolds went to look the gift horse in the mouth. Then it was that he decided that Worthowning was not worth owning. "If it's all the same to you, Mr. Allen, I'll take the goat mascot," said the Senator. "Suppose you keep the horse and give me the goat."

"Just as you like, Senator," said Allen.

So yesterday, Worthowning ran in the colors of the Allen stable in the eighth race at Charles Town.

HAPPY HORSE AND FRIEND

This is Worthowning, whose principal claim to fame previously was that his owner, former D. C. Commissioner Allen, attempted to give him to Senator Reynolds, an offer which was refused. But yesterday Worthowning had his revenge: He won the eighth at Charles Town—paid $13.60, too

He finished first, by five lengths, and fetched Mr. Allen the tidy little sum of $300. He paid $13.20 in the mutuels, and Senator Reynolds was, presumably, looking out the window, as the turf fans say.

Hoya Sophomore Dominates Trials For I. C. 4-A Meet

By the United Press

Cambridge, Mass., May 31.—Cofavorite Yale and dark-horse Pennsylvania each qualified nine men as trials were completed tonight in the sixty-fourth I. C. A. A. A. A. track and field championships at Harvard Stadium.

Only four men were left of the University of California's versatile seven-member squad that was premeet choice with Yale. The Golden Bears were given slight chance of upholding the reputation of Southern California, seven-time titlist in the past decade but not defending this year.

Individual standout of the trial competition staged before about 100 rain-coated fans was Alfred Blozis, giant Georgetown University sophomore, who smashed two meet records—in the shot-put and discus. But Barney Ewell, Penn State Negro, was close behind, qualifying with creditable performances in three events.

Blozis, a 240-pound football tackle,

No-Hitter, One-Hit Shutout Mark Bill At Ballston Park

Spectators at last night's softball doubleheader at Ballston Stadium were treated to one no-hit, no-run game and another battle that came within one man of repeating the feat.

Grace Torreyson, hurling for the Arlington Aces, was credited with the perfect performance in the opener as she set down the M. P. M. girls, 14-1. Only three foes reached first, all on errors.

In the nightcap, Temple Jarrell, of International Business Machines, had a no-hitter sewed up until the last man in the seventh and last inning. Then Cusano, of the Peck's All-Stars, of Baltimore, lobbed a lazy single over first base. He died at first, however, and Jarrell got a 4-0 victory.

Wilson High Senior Posts 2 Over Par

Shoots Kenwood In 72 to Lead George Vass; 3 Tied With 74

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Earle Skinker against the field is the cry in the seventh annual Scholastic Golf Championship as the 18-year-old Wilson High School senior and tournament favorite won medal honors over 57 starters in the qualifying round yesterday at Kenwood.

Medalist and finalist last year and the outstanding young golfer in the field, Skinker played the course in 2-over par 72 to hold a one-stroke margin over his rival from Western High, also an 18-year-old senior, George Vass. The latter was out in 36 and back in 37 while Skinker was 34-38.

In the lowest scoring medal round in the history of the tournament, three others were deadlocked with 74s while anything over 83 was too high for the championship flight. The first two medal rounds will be played today at Manor and the semifinals and finals tomorrow at Congressional, with The Washington Post trophy to the winner.

Three Score 74's

David "Scotty" Ross, captain of the Rockville team, Dick Burgess, the one-man team from Tech and Buster Mrstik, of Bethesda, all scored 74 while Bethesda's captain, Freddie Bolton, was sixth with a 75, after playing the first nine-in-one-under par 75. Frank (Reds) Clark, who deserted the golf team for baseball at Blair High, birdied the eighteenth to finish with a 76. Blair's captain, Buddy Clark, no relation, also made the championship flight.

A pair of entries that figured to make the match play rounds, Harold Kelley, No. 1 man for St. John's, and Cranford Brantley, a member of Wilson's championship interhigh team, did not qualify. Kelley a stroke out with 84 while Brantley was 85, after going out in 39.

Skinker won the medal with a 76 over the same course last year in a downpour of rain, started with a bogey 5, but he played the out nine in subpar figures by dropping 6-foot birdie putts on the sixth and eighth holes. He lost two strokes around the green on 12 and 13 on the back nine.

Vass Has Three Birdies

Playing with Vass and Ross, Skinker led them by one and two shots, respectively, on the eighteenth hole. Here the medalist topped a spoon shot but managed to get down in five while the others also went over par. Vass' card included three birdies but a big six on the second hole hurt his medal card. Ross played the nines in 37—37, while Burgess and Mrstik were each 38—36.

Skinker faces real opposition today when he meets Roosevelt's Bill Brownrigg in the first round at 8 a. m. The latter put on a sensational finish, birdies on 16 and 17, to post a 79. If Skinker gets by he meets the winner of the Ross-Don Murphy match in the afternoon. The best first round match is Vass and former Kenwood caddy, Carroll Willett, of th golfing Willett family. Charles Price, the youngest player in the tourney, 14, meets Freddie Bolton.

Wilson and Bethesda each qualified three players for the first flight while Roosevelt, Central and Blair are represented by two players each.

Victor Shows Liking for Soft Track

Pays $4.80 Mutuel; Quaternary Runs Second; Best Policy Third in Feature

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., May 31.—Schley Goree, a 5-year-old son of the mud-running Ed Crump, found a soft, sticky track to his liking today and galloped off with the Tyler Purse, serving feature purposes on the Friday program here. Away from the winner's circle since April 17 when he won at Havre de Grace, Schley Goree turned in his second victory in a dozen starts this season in impressive fashion.

Racing in the colors of R. A. Bowman, jr., Virginia sportsman, Schley Goree was well in the hands of Jockey Willie Dufford at the end of the test of about seven furlongs. He finished six lengths in advance of T. J. Collins' Quaternary ad another length further ahead of J. L. Garthright's Best Policy.

Schley Goree's chances were well liked by the crowd and he paid a $4.80 mutuel in the role of favorite in a field of eight. The winner was clocked in 1:30 4-5, fair time over a track that was several seconds off due to rains last night.

Vendor's Lien, a winner on yesterday's program, appeared on the way to an "iron-man" victory as the field set out for the first turn. The Vanderpool gelding had a lead and drew out. But on the swing to the backstretch, Dufford sent Schley Goree up. The favorite wore down Vendor's Lien to take command. From that point to the end it was a question of how far out Schley Goree would be at the end. Quaternary and Best Policy did the most late running but were not in the same class with Schley Goree today.

An oddity of daily double betting cropped up today when two well-played horses won the key race and the payoff was $176. Stubbs, an $8.20 shot, took the second race, leading Blue Prelude and Never Home to the wire. Princess Lady, at $9.40, accounted for the third race. A select few had the "8 and 2" combination.

The Roane Purse, better known as the fourth race, went to Likly Lad under the riding of Jockey Sammy Palumbo. The Peter Hastings geldings, a $3.80 favorite, finished well ahead of Hi Blaze and Don Gomez in a sprint of four and a half furlongs.

Bill Bennings

—At The Post

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

We sort of miss the man who was cutting the grass in the infield. He worked right through the races and, as far as I was able to see, he did not even look up when the horses went by. Some times wish I was that immune to the darn things. Decoration Day's betting was above that for the similar day last year. The Jockey Willie Dufford-Maxine Machado wedding will be held in Virginia on Saturday night, according to present plans. Remember last year I told you about Johnny Hell, the man in charge of the box seats here, whose wife sent him to buy grass seed and he bought bird seed with the result that his lawn grew everything but corn. Well, he is having the same trouble this year and is trying to get me to turn my horses out on his lawn to chew the stuff after the meeting is over. Tell the truth, the Bennings Stable may have to take him up. And still no Pork Chops. Charles (Hurry Up) Kellert is the popular Western Union Telegraph manager here. Jockey Tony Vesseli is not as badly hurt as his face appears. He was scratched up in that recent fall but most of what seems to be damage to his countenance is iodine. The veteran rider is game, however, and that spill did not put a crimp in his good riding style. The track has invested in a new harrow. Track Superintendent Henry Erickson is to be congratulated on the splendid condition in which he had the oval at the start of the May 30 program. The day before the wise guys around the paddock wanted to bet even money that the track would be slow. One of the early races was right up against the track record. Then the rains came again and Erickson had to start trying to get it in shape again. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—Prosit has plenty of foot and appears capable of handling the 116-pound assignment. I'm going to string along. Bailris was a winner here and should go well in company of this sort. Small Change has some class and will be right there.

Second race—Notoriety won over this track and will be right at home at this short sprint route. Timber Storm has demonstrated plenty of ability since the meeting opened and will be right there. Happy Hostess should go well.

Third race—Gem appears slightly the best of the eight eligibles for this event. I'm going to take a chance on this one. Blind Talk turned in a good effort last out and deserves consideration if taken off the reserve list. Golden Key for the show end.

Fourth race—Lead Please showed improvement last out and will be close today. I believe this one can take it all. Balkanese is consistent and belongs in this company. Sun Voter will like the track and won one here.

Fifth race—Blabiah has done about everything asked hereabouts and should take this purse. Royal Marriage is much better than shown in that last and is a threat. Randle's Queen downed cheap ones recently.

Sixth race—I might be talking through my hat but I'm going to stick to Devil's Broth in this. I'm satisfied that this one is much better than shown. If you don't like them long, lay off. Salian would have been closer last out with much better racing luck. Kenner awoke once.

Seventh race—Sandy Belle knows her way around this race track and gets my call over this gang. Petee Lad has all his speed and should like going. Wahcoo could take it all but that last was miserable.

Eighth race—Caffeine will appreciate the track condition and gets my call in this rather open affair. Sea Finn is as fit as last Saturday's winning effort. Lake Shore for the show award.

Substitute races—If No. 1 is used, I'll take Brainchild, Margie Wrack and Blox. If No. 2 is used, I'll take Squawker, Congo Prince and Cautious Bo.

Best bet—Blabiah.

Day Off Wins Amstel Purse In Heavy Going

Cutlas 2d in $1,200 Race; Faxshade Third 15 Lengths Behind

By the Associated Press

Delaware Park, Del., May 31.—Greentree Stable's Day Off, a superior off-track performer, found the heavy going just to his liking here today and he raced to a one-length victory over H. H. Temple, jr.,'s Cutlas in the featured Amstel Purse.

A test at a mile and a sixteenth for 4-year-olds and up, the Amstel field was greatly reduced by scratches and brought out only four competitors for the $1,200 purse. Fifteen lengths behind Cutlas, Christiana Stable's Foxshade earned third money over Bewitched.

Day Off was ridden by R. Donoso and the gray son of Royal Minstrel and Easy Day was the first winner of the meeting for the Greentree establishment. The crowd of 5,000 made the colt the favorite and he paid $3.

Day Off ran a winning race from beginning to end, but had to be hard hustled all through the stretch to stave off a bold challenge from Cutlas. Foxshade and Bewitched were never serious threats and finished far behind the one-two horses. Day Off's time for the mile and a sixteenth was 1:51 3-5.

Know Your Dogs—No. 80 of a Series

—By George Berner

AMERICAN WATER SPANIEL

Regarded as an American dog, the result of many spaniel crosses, he is not as yet recognized by the A. K. C. As a retriever in the water he is unexcelled and those who know him are loud in their praise of him as an all round hunter and pet. His coat is fine and closely curled and solid liver or dark chococlate in color. He should be from 16 to 18 inches high and weigh from 28 to 45 pounds. A well set up dog

Navy, Army Meet in Baseball and Track at Annapolis Today

West Point Choice On Cinders, Nine Slight Underdog; 60 Cadets Make Trip

Annapolis, Md., May 31.—The light blue-gray uniforms of the West Point cadets contrasted conspicuously to the darker blue of the Annapolis midshipmen here today when a contingent of 60 of the Army lads arrived, all set for their annual clashes in field and track events and on the baseball diamond. These two contests will furnish the first really big splurge of "June Week" commencement ceremonies at the naval school, although graduates to the number of several hundred, some of 1879, participated in the annual reunion and banquet tonight.

Local interest also will be centered on the banks of Hudson River, as the Naval Academy today sent three teams to West Point to contest with the Cadets, namely lacrosse, tennis and golf.

The Army group includes 42 runners, jumpers and weight men, and 18 baseball tossers. The party was under the direct charge of Lieut. C. E. Corn, officer-representative for baseball at the Point, and Walter French, head baseball coach. The latter, though not now in the military service, is well remembered here, as he starred for three seasons in football as well as baseball, while a cadet at West Point, and was a thorn in the flesh of Navy in the annual battles.

Bright sunshine greeted the arrival of the cadets at 2:30, in contrast to heavy intermittent rains that had prevailed here for the last ten days. Indications were that the respective arenas of combat would be in good condition by tomorrow. The field and track meet is scheduled for 10 in the morning and the baseball game at 2:30 in the afternoon. The former looms as the outstanding attraction, as both academies boast their strongest teams in recent years. Army is unbeaten in collegiate competition in the last two years. Navy tamed all opposition this year, until striking a snag in the formidable Pennsylvania State College aggregation last Saturday.

With both having well-balanced teams, the outcome of the track meet is a toss-up, but the Naval lads are conceded a slight edge on the diamond.

The Middies get the call on the diamond largely through obvious better pitching. Max Bishop, head coach, will send Norman Smith, a youngster, or third classman, to the mound. Smith has been the most consistent hurler this season, having annexed five of Navy's six victories in a schedule of 18 games. Smith will have a capable relief man in Lefty Schoenbaum.

In the series of 33 ball games between the two schools, Army holds the lead 19 to 14, and likewise has the edge in track meets, 9 to 4.

Iowa Nine Wins Big Ten Clash

Minnesota Misses First Championship

By the Associated Press

Iowa City, Iowa, May 31.—The University of Minnesota's chances for its third big ten baseball championship were shattered here today when the Gophers fell before Iowa, 7 to 2, in the first of a two-game series.

The defeat left Illinois and Northwestern, which have finished the season, sharing the title, and gave Iowa a chance to nose the Gophers out of third place.

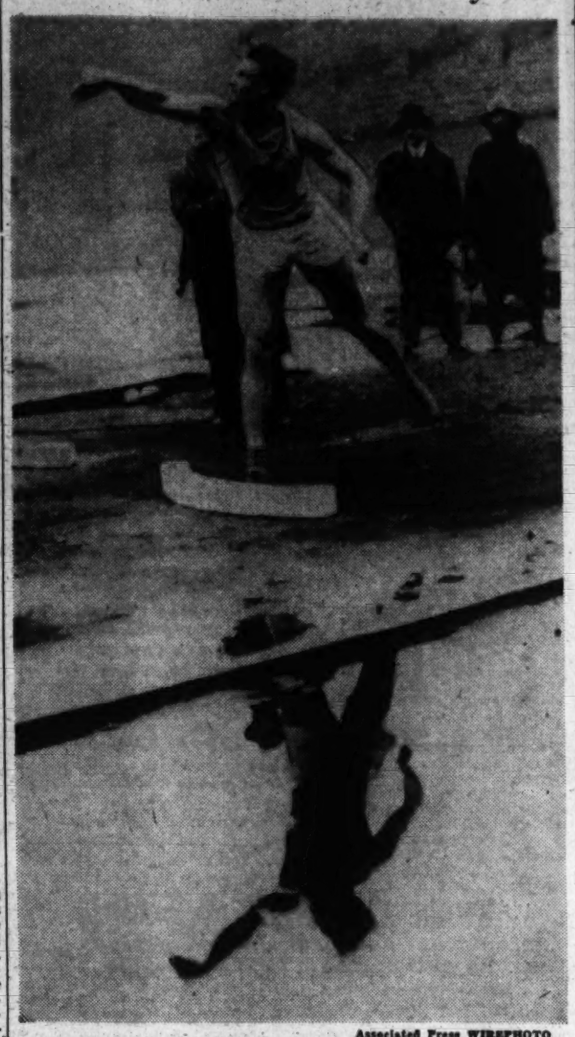

Pitching his final game for Iowa, Harold Haub limited the Minnesotans to four hits, while his mates played errorless ball.

Today's setback dropped Minnesota into fourth place, with six victories and three defeats, while the Hawkeyes advanced to third with seven wins and three defeats. Tomorrow's game here closes the conference season.

No Reflection on His Ability

Al Blozis is shown above in person and mirrored in a puddle of rain water, but certainly no reflection is meant on his ability to throw the shot and discus, for yesterday at Cambridge, Mass., he established new I. C. 4-A meet records in both events to lead qualifiers. Above the 240-pound Georgetown sophomore throws the shot 53 feet 6⅛ inches to beat the former record easily set his first mark in his second try at the shot-put when he hurled the slippery 16-pound ball 53 feet 6⅛ inches, 4⅛ inches farther than the previous record set by John Lyman, of Stanford, in 1934 at Philadelphia.

Blozis then tossed the discus 167 feet 4⅝ inches, eclipsing Eric Krenz's 10-year-old mark by nearly 4 feet.

Ewell sped to routine triumphs in both his 100 and 200 yard dash trials, and qualified in the broad jump by finishing third to defending titlist Anson Perina, of Princeton, and Frank Ohl, of Pittsburgh.

Close behind Yale and Pennsylvania in the race for team honors was Pittsburgh with eight representatives still in the running. New York University, paced by Jim Herbert and Leslie MacMitchell, qualified seven.

The original entry list of more than 400 athletes from 28 colleges was pared to 87 qualifiers carrying the colors of 22 schools. Team and individual champions will be crowned in tomorrow's finals.

Both track and jumping pits were covered by the rain that turned the stadium into a veritable quagmire before half of today's program was completed.

Penn State had six qualifiers, Manhattan, Harvard and Cornell five, and Georgetown and California four.

Riganti Honored

The sportsmanship award, a stop watch, went to Paul Riganti, the South American champion whose car crashed through a fence early in the race. The award—presented for the first time in several years—goes to the driver showing the greatest sportsmanship and general mental attitude.

Riganti, who was able to be present tonight, expressed thanks through his interpreter for the award and drew a laugh when he said, "The committee which awarded the first place prize to Wilbur Shaw made a mistake. The race was won by Riganti since I was the first one to get out."

Rex Mays, of Glendale, Calif., who finished second, collected $16,950 and in addition won a gold belt buckle presented by Joel Thorne, of Tucson, Ariz., for turning the fastest qualifying lap.

Man. of the Month

The Man of the Month contest is sponsored jointly by The Washington Post and Station WJSV. Following each of the Nats' games, Arch McDonald will award points to Washington players as he deems performances merit. The Man of the Month will be presented with a $50 merchandise order by The Post.

By Arch McDonald
Station WJSV Baseball Broadcaster

The Man of the Month among the Nats for May was.

Gerald Walker.

Repeating the honors he won in April, Walker stamped himself as the outstanding performer on the club during the past 30 days by amassing 68 points in the daily awards based on merit of play.

Walker's triumph is fitting. He continued to lead the Nats in runs batted in, and to run the bases in sensational style. His clutch-hitting ability has accounted for 30 runs this season and ranks him third behind Jimmy Foxx and Hal Trosky for the runs-batted-in championship.

The man who beat Walker out for Man of the Month honors was Zeke Bonura, who finished second in the race with 55 points. Bonura has been a consistent performer since joining the Nats and is establishing himself as a distinct threat for future Man of the Month awards.

Jimmy Bloodworth finished third in the May contest, three points ahead of George Case, with Dutch Leonard fifth. The final standings for May:

Woman Boxing Referee Retires From Activity

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, May 31.—Mrs. Belle Martell said today she was "giving boxing back to the men."

The only woman boxing referee in the country will retire from active participation in the sport late in June.

Mrs. Martell has been associated with her husband, Art Martell, for many years in the promotion of amateur boxing in southern California. Two weeks ago, the California Athletic Commission adopted a new set of rules which denied women permission to referee or engage in work inside the ring. The action followed a wave of controversy stirred up over Mrs. Martell's refereeing activities.

"I have taken a great deal from a certain class in the boxing game during my years in it," said Mrs. Martell today, "but the stupid and ridiculous charges stirred up during the past month have brought about my decision to step out and give the men, who have been blasting so loudly, a chance to see what they can do for boxing."

Pirates Recall Eddie Fernandes

Pittsburgh, May 31 (AP).—In need of a hitting catcher, the Pirates took up their option today on Backstop Eddie Fernandes, of Portland, Oreg., in the Pacific Coast League, and ordered him to report immediately.

The May 14 option gave the Pirates the right to purchase Fernandes by September 1 for delivery next season. They are obtaining him immediately, however, by paying the "fixed sum" arranged earlier and sending Catcher Joe Schultz, jr., to Portland under option. Fernandes is batting .333.

2 D. C. Golfers In Semifinals Of Hermitage

Bogart, Burnett Win, Play Kent and Burke Respectively

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., May 23.—Washington sent two men today into the semifinals of the fifth annual Hermitage Country Club Invitation Golf Tournament. The other semifinal berths went to Charlie Kent, of Richmond, and Aulick Burkee, of Petersburg.

Ralph Bogart, 20-year-old Congressional Country Club star of Washington, accounted for the big upset of the day in scoring a 1-up victory over Bill Cunningham, of Richmond, the tournament medalist. Bogart eliminated Bill Wenzel, of Washington, 4 and 2, in the afternoon quarterfinals.

Volney Burnett, recent winner of the Chevy Chase Invitation Tournament and Washington's other semifinalist, eliminated Mike J. Siebert, 6 and 5, and Sam Cowin, 5 and 3. Both his victims are Richmonders.

Kent, veteran Country Club of Virginia team captain, defeated Russ Hollebaugh, of Washington, the defending champion, 6 and 5, in the morning round and came back in the afternoon to trim Jimmy Morgan, of Richmond, 4 and 3.

Burke, medalist in the State amateur tourney last year, scored a 6 and 5 victory over A. B. Conner and a 3 and 2 win over H. E. Musser, both of Richmond.

Bogart will meet Kent and Burke will take on Burnett in tomorrow morning's semifinal matches. The winners will meet in the title match in the afternoon.

The longest match of the day forced Sam Cowin, of Richmond to go 22 holes before winning over Earl McAleer, of Washington, 1 up. Other first round matches saw Wenzel eliminating Earl Howell, Richmond, 1 up; Morgan defeating Albert Gross, Petersburg, 5 and 4, and Musser defeating C. B. Walden, Richmond City champion, 4 and 3.

Fighting Fox Out for Revenge In $5,000 Roseben 'Cap Today

Disqualification Loss to The Chief in Excelsior Rankles in Woodward Stable; Seven to Start

By the Associated Press

New York, May 31.—Fighting Fox, William Woodward's "yes-and-no" horse who won—and lost—in his last outing, comes back to the races tomorrow looking for revenge in the $5,000-added Roseben Handicap, half of a Saturday "double feature" at Belmont Park.

In the co-headliner, Starmount Stable's Damaged Goods, who turned in a smashing victory in the Acorn ten days ago, will try to prove that triumph wasn't a fluke by taking a crack at the twenty-fourth running of the mile and three-eighths Coaching Club American Oaks for 3-year-old fillies.

Fighting Fox, a 5-year-old, has been just about as unpredictable-able a runner as you'll find around in his three years of racing. Despite his hot-and-cold performances, however, he collected $75,625 last year. So far this season, he wound up first in the 6-furlong Paumonok Handicap, packing 130 pounds, and the mile and sixteenth Excelsior Handicap, carrying 128. He finished a clear length in front in the latter, but was disqualified because of a foul, and Maxwell Howard's The Chief took the winner's pot.

Naturally, this didn't sit well in Woodward's stable. So Trainer Sunny Jim Fitsimmons has the Fox ranin' to go in tomorrow's three-quarter affair, despite the load of 132 pounds the horse has been asked to tote. The Chief also is in the field of seven, but Mr. Fitz isn't so worried about him as he is about the mud-runners, unless the threat of rain leaves and the track dries out overnight. In off going, H. Bruce's 7-year-old Jay Jay and Mrs. Parker Corning's Straight Lead, a 3-year-old who hasn't done much this year, may give trouble. George D. Widener's speedy Dr. Whinny, who has a snappy six-furlong victory to his credit already this spring, also is an outside possibility.

Damaged Goods took the Acorn by five lengths and returned the longest price of the New York season for it—$143.50 for $2. She won't be anything close to that tomorrow in the field of nine, especially with William Dupont's Fairy Chant and J. O. Keene's War Beauty around to run with her.

Castoff by A's in '39, Finney Stars for Bosox

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Lou Finney (left) with Dominic DiMaggio, the prize Boston rookie who was benched when Finney started belting the ball

Veteran Outfielder, Purchased for $7,500, Leads American League Hitters; Attributes Improvement to New Style Bat and Coaching

By George Kirksey,
United Press Staff Writer.

New York, May 31.—Released last May by the Athletics for the waiver price of $7,500, Lou Finney today is leading the American League in hitting and playing $100,000 ball for the Boston Red Sox.

In six years with the the A's and one with the Red Sox, Finney's lifetime major league average up to this season was .282. Today he is hitting .396, having made 53 hits in 134 times at bat in 30 games. How did Finney become a ball of fire overnight? It's simple to hear the curly-haired Alabama boy tell it.

"I never had a bat I liked in my life," says Finney. "So last May when the Red Sox played an exhibition game in Louisville I went out to the bat factory determined to get the kind of a stick I wanted. I saw some old Max Bishop models stuck away and I picked up one of them. I liked the feel of them so I had a model made up with a few minor changes. Right away I began to hit better. I wound up last season batting .310, the best year I'd ever had.

"That was the first step. Then I began to watch Ted Williams and, with coaching from Hughie Duffy, I learned to copy Ted's wrist action and follow through. You remember Duffy, our coach, was a pretty fair hitter in his time, having hit .438 back in the long ago."

But even with his improved hitting, Finney was due to ride the bench this season. An ankle injury to Rookie Dom DiMaggio paved the way for him to get into the line-up. He was hot from the start and Manager Joe Cronin couldn't bench him.

"Finney has been tremendous for us," says Cronin. "His hitting has won him the rightfield job and I'm going down the line with him. He's a great team player. Never squawks or moans and does a great job every day."

Early in May when the Red Sox played in New York, Finney attended the Lew Jenkins-Lou Ambers fight with the writer and casually remarked: "You know I just can't hit in Yankee Stadium. There's something about the park that gets me down."

The next day Finney hit a homer with the bases loaded, a double and a single against the Yanks. In the second game of the Memorial Day doubleheader at Yankee Stadium Finney got five hits in six times at bat, missing the sixth hit only because the official scorer ruled an error for Third Baseman Knickerbocker when the ball hit his shoulder.

"Maybe I learned something from that Jenkins on how to hit," Finney said after yesterday's game.

Finney is one of Tom Yawkey's greatest buys. Known for his penchant for spending big money for any player he likes, Yawkey bought Finney largely as first base protection for Jimmy Foxx and never dreamed he'd pick up a contender for the batting title for so small a sum as $7,500. Finney must be good to keep the $75,000 DiMaggio in the shadows of the dugout.

Gregory Rice To Run June 8 At Princeton

Lash Also to Race In Two-Mile Event At Invitation Meet

By the Associated Press

Princeton, N. J., May 31.—Gregory Rice, Notre Dame's distance runner, has entered the Princeton Invitation Track Meet, R. Kenneth Fairman, graduate manager of athletics, announced today.

Rice was one of 11 added competitors listed by Fairman who said acceptances from only five others were needed to complete the field of 36 for the meet June 8.

Joining the Notre Dame star in the two-mile contest were Donald R. Lash, Indiana State policeman who won the 1936 two-mile event, and Forest Efaw, of Oklahoma A. and M.

Louis Zamperini, of Southern California, I. C. 4-A. champion, was one of three to enter the mile race. He will compete with Mason Chronister, of the University of Maryland, Southern Conference titleholder, and Walter J. Mehl, former Wisconsin University ace. All have run the distance in less than 4 minutes and 15 seconds.

The half-mile event has attracted Edward Burrowes, jr., Princeton sophomore; James Kehoe, University of Maryland's Southern Conference ruler; Richard Belvea, University of Pennsylvania; Campbell Kane, Indiana University, and David Morrison, University of North Carolina.

Chuck Fenske, who captured last year's mile contest from a field that included Sydney Wooderson, of England, has not yet accepted his 1940 invitation.

Word was also awaited from Les Mac Mitchell, New York University miler; Dixie Garner, Washington State, and Edward Holderman, Purdue, both two-milers, and Edward Buxton, University of Wisconsin, Western Conference half-mile king.

FBI Ties Gas Light, 6-6

Darkness Interferes With League Contest

One of the closest battles of the United States Government League season was staged yesterday by F. B. I. and Washington Gas, a 6-6 nine-inning deadlock. The game was called at that point, due to darkness.

The G-Men started things with a pair of runs in the third, but Gas came back to knot it up in the fifth. Each team had three runs in the sixth and one in the seventh. Nau, Clark and Boggs had triples for the Gasmen, while F. B. I.'s only extra-base blow was a double by Meyers.

Loan League Hears Jacobs

One of the best attended of the year was the monthly meeting of District of Columbia Building & Loan League this week at the Raleigh Hotel with William N. Payne, jr., president of the group, acting as chairman. Members heard Granville B. Jacobs stress importance of proper customer contacts. Mr. Jacobs urged closer attention to personnel problems and gave instances of the newer appreciation of this phase of public relations.

According to Mr. Payne, the June meeting of the league will be an outing at Washington Golf and Country Club, June 19. A committee headed by Chapin B. Bauman is planning the event, which will include a golf tournament and swimming contest prior to the dinner.

Results of the recent spring tournament held at Recreation Bowling Alleys by the women's and men's teams of Washington Loan & Trust Club were announced this week at the monthly meeting by President John L. Cain. Mrs. Percy Walton won first prize; Leona Draeger, second, and Ann Barr, third; while Rose Boyce received award for the highest number of marks. In the men's contest, the winner was Harry L. Downey; Harry L. Smith, jr., was second, and Herbert W. Primm, third.

The club was entertained by a showing of colored films depicting a tour through the Canadian Rockies, Banff and Lake Louise. The June meeting of the club will be at Bay Ridge, June 8.

July Delivery Of Cotton Under Heavy Pressure

New York, May 31 (AP).—Cotton futures lost 10 to 20 points today under constant hedging and outright liquidation in the July delivery.

Buying currents barely stirred in the market as operators gloomily considered the prospects of sharply curtailed exports of the staple next season.

Steady hedging pressure had the experts puzzled until it was traced to Brazilian operations against South American cottons. Brokers pointed out such business will probably increase as scope of the Liverpool market, formerly used for such deals, has been greatly restricted.

4-Month Net Rises Despite Disruption Of Foreign Trade

By the Associated Press

New York, May 31.—J. A. Brown, president of the Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., world-wide marketer of petroleum products, told stockholders today profits of the company in the first four months this year improved substantially over the like in 1939 period despite war-time disruption of foreign trade.

He estimated net income for the four months ended April 30 at $19,500,000, equal to about 62 cents a share of capital stock, exclusive of earnings from subsidiaries in Germany, France, England, Norway, Denmark, Holland and Belgium.

"We do not know whether any of our European properties have suffered any substantial damage to date," he said, in the annual meeting. "We cannot tell what provisions might have to be made by the close of the year for losses or damages or for any other causes affecting our foreign assets."

John B. Stetson Co.

John B. Stetson Co., hat manufacturers, today reported net profit for six months ended April 29 of $49,575, equal to 82 cents a share on 8 per cent cumulative preferred stock, compared with $37,090, or 62 cents on preferred, in the comparable period a year earlier.

Todd Shipyards Corp.

Todd Shipyards Corporation and subsidiaries reported today net income for the fiscal year ended March 31 of $832,727, or $4.05 a share, compared with $250,150, or $1.22 a share, in the preceding 12 months.

Board Reports Bank Reserves At Record High

Lendable excess reserves of banks gained $10,000,000 to a new record high of $6,360,000,000 in the week ended May 29.

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday the increase was due primarily to Treasury gold purchases, which were partly offset by an increase of money in circulation.

The board said that the 12 Federal Reserve banks made no purchases or sales of Government securities during the week.

The board's statement said:

"During the week ended May 29 member bank reserve balances decreased $8,000,000. Reductions in member bank reserves arose from increases of $72,000,000 in money in circulation, $14,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts and $8,000,000 in Treasury deposits with Federal Reserve banks and from a decrease of $9,000,000 in reserve bank credit, offset in part by an increase of $91,000,000 in gold stock and a decrease of $4,000,000 in Treasury cash. Excess reserves of member banks on May 29 were estimated to be approximately $6,360,000,000, a decrease of $10,000,000 for the week."

Reports of Big British Order Bring Heavy Buying of Copper

New York, May 31 (AP).—Reports the British government was in the local copper market for around 25,000 tons for immediate delivery unleashed a flood of orders from domestic buyers, trade sources revealed today.

Britain has ordered about 10,000 tons of copper at a shade above 11½ cents a pound. Additional tonnages at least equal to that amount and probably running to another 15,000 tons were expected to be ordered soon, it was said.

Domestic consumers' business was done at 11½ cents after they learned of the British order. The concerted demand from domestic and overseas buyers practically cleaned out the outside, or resale, market, dealers reported.

Independent consumers were goaded into action, they added, by the possibility Allied orders would sweep the market of prompt shipment metal at a time when our own national defense needs were likely to make new demands.

The British orders were in addition to a 75,000-ton purchase by the French earlier this week. Metal for the French, however, will be supplied by American-owned foreign mines.

The British also were believed to have taken nearly all immediately available supplies of brass in the local market in the last few weeks.

Meanwhile, a scramble to get steel—comparable with the excited burst of buying at the outset of the war last September—was reported today by Dow, Jones & Co., financial news agency. Both export and domestic buying, it was said, had been stimulated by the urge to lay in stocks before heavy industries feel the force of the United States' big armament program.

With steel operations already up to about 76 per cent of capacity on the belated spring upswing from the year's low of 60 per cent, the agency said trade sources looked for further expansion in June.

"Predictions of a rate exceeding 90 per cent of capacity are general," it added. "The high mark during the bulge last fall was a schedule of 94.4 per cent for the week beginning November 27.

Steel Shares in Fore of Moderate Advance; Armament Boost Demand Spurs Buying; Few Changes in Light Bond Deals

New York, May 31.—Several important news developments were arranged on the advancing side of the market today, but gains in share prices, other than steels, were not important. For every circumstance that appeared bullish on domestic and foreign fronts, it seemed, there were counter factors dictating caution. For example, while the Allies gave a better account of themselves against the Nazis, traders could not be induced to extend their commitments until Italy's intentions were made clear.

Again it was evident that an enormous stimulus will be given to industry in effecting national defense. But Wall Street is less enthusiastic over such a prospect because it believes that the aggression threat to the United States, tardily discovered, means another four years of Roosevelt.

Aircrafts Also Gain

Shares advanced irregularly in the morning with steels most prominent. In midsession sidewise movements prevailed but late in the day a moderate flow of new buying was touched off by the President's demand for another billion for armament, and authority to mobilize the country's defense forces when and as required. Most stocks were going rather well at the close, aircrafts in particular making good progress in the last hour. Metal shares also did well on reports that Great Britain is arranging for substantial tonnages of the red metal in this country, an insurance against interference with her supplies from North African mines.

The 100 stocks were 0.34 point higher at the close with steels and stores recording the best advances. Volume of 526,760 shares was the smallest since May 6. In the bond division there were few important changes. United States treasuries were shaded a little, reflecting expectations of huge expenditures. Allied currencies made good advances in foreign exchange dealings. There was acute weakness in cotton and wheat. Confusion over the temporary closing at Bombay was a factor.

Favorites on Upside

With few exceptions active stocks of the day were old favorites, including such seasoned specimens as Steel common, Anaconda, Bethlehem, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Socony - Vacuum, International Nickel and International Paper issues, the majority being on the upside at the end of the day. Lockheed, Curtiss - Wright and Boeing were briskly traded with no very important price change.

Oil shares were inclined to be irregular. Traders interested in the group gave close attention to the statement made by Socony-Vacuum's management at the annual meeting. This emphasized the uncertainty of foreign operations of American companies and the impossibility of accurately forecasting financial returns from subsidiary activities in the belligerent zones. Standard of New Jersey, most active issue in the group, lost ¾, while Texas Corporation advanced 1¾ on a moderate volume. In the arms section, du Pont rose more than 2. Sears Roebuck added 1½ to lead merchandising shares. Gains of a point or more appeared in Union Carbide, Union Pacific, United Aircraft and Bethlehem Steel.

Bond Trading Sluggish

Listed bond trading remained extremely quiet today, with United States Treasury and foreign issues lower, while most corporate loans of domestic origin were marked upward. Turnover amounted only to $4,340,000, or just about the total of the preholiday session. The thin market made possible gains of 1 to 2 points in a number of speculative bonds.

United States Government issues suffered from the endless requests for still heavier spending by the New Deal, and the prospect that not only the $45,000,000,000 but even the $50,000,000,000 level of indebtedness will be passed before very long. Losses ran to ¼ point in longer dated bonds. Best rated corporate issues held around former levels.

Railroad bonds of the speculative classification were in quiet demand, and gains were sizable here and there. Local tractions were better, despite the lack of movement in city transit bonds. Share privilege obligations showed small advances, and other groups likewise did well.

Australian and Canadian bonds were steady, while German issues were irregular. Italians dropped on the fresh rumors of early participation in the European conflict. Scandinavians attracted some buying, but Belgians receded again. Latin-Americans were quiet at former levels.

Holiday Curtails Auto Production

Detroit, May 31 (AP).—Ward's Automotive Reports today placed this week's output of the automobile plants at 60,980 units, compared with 96,910 last week and 32,445 this week a year ago.

The decline this week was due to the three-day program in most factories because of the Memorial Day holiday.

Summer Court Planned

The District Court will keep abreast of its criminal calendar this summer by holding one criminal court throughout July and September. This will enable the court to dispose of the usually lightened burden of criminal trials, so that District Attorney Curran will not be confronted with a heavy backlog of cases when the autumn term opens in October.

Steel Output Boosted

Buffalo, N. Y., May 31 (AP).—Operation plans announced today will raise the Buffalo area steel production rate to 79½ per cent over the week-end.

Wheat Slumps On War News, Crop Reports

Trade Regulations Uncertainty Adds To Bearishness

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 31.—Wheat prices fell as much as 2 cents a bushel today in an outburst of post-holiday liquidation based on war developments, expectations that forthcoming private crop reports may raise estimates of domestic wheat production, and uncertainty about trade regulations affecting futures quotations.

Wheat closed at the day's bottom, almost 3 cents below early highs and 1⅛-2⅛ cents lower than Wednesday, with July 81½-⅝, September 81⅝-¾. Corn dropped more than 2 cents from early highs and closed 1⅛-1½ lower than Wednesday, July 61¼-⅜, September 60½. Oats closed ⅛-1¼ off; rye 1⅝-2⅝ lower and lard 8-10 lower.

Allied reverses in the North unnerved many dealers while some were disturbed by other war developments including reports of possible Italian intervention or maneuvers for a negotiated peace. While this tended to keep many traders on the sidelines, the late sell-off forced transactions to limit losses.

In this connection, many traders paid particular attention to developments following a Memorial Day meeting of Board of Trade officials with Government authorities in Washington. A report that Washington authorities were considering a request of exchange men that they assent to removing of minimum prices for grains established as of the close May 18 after the sharp price tumbles of that week brought no comment here.

Foreign Markets

London, May 31 (AP).—Securities prices, aside from government bonds, headed downward from start to finish today. With industrial leaders depressed by possibility of additional taxation, investment money was driven into the gilt-edge list, where prices ended fractionally higher. Anglo-Iranian was a weak spot among generally lower oil stocks. Domestic rails and Kaffirs followed the downward pattern. Base metal stocks held up comparatively well.

Paris.—Irregular price currents developed in the bourse today after opening steadiness. The end-of-the-month settlement passed without shock, since speculative positions have been steadily reduced recently. Mediterranean issues fluctuated uncertainly. Belgian bonds hit new lows, but other foreign securities tended upward.

The Brighter Side

—By Damon Runyon

Mr. Joe Turp writes:

Dear sir: last week I made a little unexpected extra dough so I took my wife Ethel to a picture over on Broadway and afterwards I took her to a swell night club for something to eat and while we was sitting there I took out my pocket knife and began to clean my finger nails.

RUNYON

My wife Ethel ses for goodness sake Joe Turp what are you doing? I ses you can see what I am doing. I ses I am cleaning my finger nails. She ses well stop it right away before somebody else sees you. Why Joe I am mortified to death to think of you doing such a thing as cleaning your finger nails in a place like this and right at the table too.

I ses what is wrong with me cleaning my finger nails in this place and at the table? Ethel ses why its vulgar. When somebody wants to clean their finger nails they ought to do it at home and out of sight of Everybody. They ought to cleam them in the bath room where nobody can see them. Joe I thought you knew more about manners than that.

What's the Difference?

I ses look Ethel. I ses a minute ago you had out your comb and was combing your hair right here at this table. I ses do you remember that? Ethel ses of course I remember it. I ses well what is the difference between me cleaning my finger nails at the table and you combing your hair the same place?

Ethel ses why Joe there is all the difference in the world. All ladies comb there hair wherever they are no matter if they are at the table or not. I ses Ethel I have been married to you quite awhile and I never saw you comb your hair at the table in our house. She ses of course not. Thats a different thing Joe. I ses whats different about it? She ses well the difference is a lady does not care so much if her hair is combed when she is home as she does when she is in a night club and besides Joe it is very fashionable for somebody to comb their hair at the table in a night club. All the ladies do it.

"Fine State of Affairs"

I ses well maybe I can make it fashionable for somebody to clean their finger nails at the table. I ses it is no worse than somebody combing their hair there and it does not get any hairs in peoples grub, and just then a sad looking guy at the table next to us leaned over and tapped me on the shoulder and ses pal you ses a mouthfull there.

I ses who are you Mack? He ses I am the owner of this joint and I have had six beefs already tonight about hairs in the petite marmite. All the dames in the joint must be shedding. I ses well I only got one hair in my grub and I am not making any beef because it was my wife Ethel's hair. I ses I know the color of her hair. I ses this is my wife Ethel here Mack and he ses pleased to meet you lady. No offense I hope about what I ses about the hairs in the petite marmite.

Ethel ses well it's a fine thing if ladies cannot comb their hair some place without everybody making a scene about it and I ses I am not making any scene Ethel. The sad looking guy ses count me out too lady. I get enough scenes at home without making any here in my own joint. You go ahead and comb your hair all you want.

Laundry Bill Hit Roof

I ses if she does I will keep on cleaning my finger nails here and the guy ses all right pal. Go as far as you like. She's your wife, not mine. Ethel ses why Joe I am surprised at you raising such a disturbance over a little thing like me combing my hair at the table I ses you had a whole toolbox full of junk out of your bag making your lips up with that red stuff.

The sad looking guy leaned over again and ses did she use my napkins or my tablecloth to wipe it off with? I ses what do you mean Mack? He ses, O, all the dames use my napkins or my tablecloth to wipe their lips with when they are making themselves up. My laundry bills are what keeps this joint running at a loss.

Ethel ses Joe now I have been insulted. I have bee insulted by you and by that fellow too but I can excuse him because I think he is drunk. You are the one who has insulted me the worst and I ses Ethel sweets I was only kidding you. I ses you go ahead and comb your hair at the table all you want and if any of your hairs get in my grub they will only flavor it. I ses you make up our lips all you want to and I will kiss it off afterwards.

Ethel ses will you Joe? I ses certainly I will and the sad looking guy ses lady I am going to apologize to you in a quart of nice wine and Ethel ses all right I will accept your apology too. So we had the wine and when we was leaving the guy called me back and ses pal drop in and see me some time when you are alone. I want to get together with a guy who can handle his wife like you.

Yours truly,

JOE TURP.

Aztecs Rally To Beat D. C. Roller Team

4,000 See 'Slam' In Open House Win For Chicagoans

While a crowd of 4,000 spectators looked on, the Chicago Aztecs scored a grand slam in the open house period last night to forge from behind and nose out the Washington Pawnees in their Roller Derby game at Riverside Stadium, 19 to 16.

It was the Aztec's fifth victory in 11 starts and a victory in their 8:15 o'clock meeting tonight would enable them to deadlocked their series with the Pawnees at 6-all.

Jim (Spider) McCaskey, who experienced several bad spills in the course of the evening, completed a clean sweep in the open house period when he blocked out Capt. Ray Gowin, of the Pawnees, and scored the final two points of the open house period. Alicie Gadias and Steve Irwin previously had contributed the points that sent Chicago ahead at 17-16.

While the near-capacity house booed its disapproval, Vera McClelland, red haired captain of the Chicago girls, was ordered from the track after being fined a total of $16 for continued brawling late in the game. Several wars with Bernice Abar and other members of the Pawnees resulted in this action.

Shirley Sachs, diminutive Washington skater, twice scored two points while Honey Thomas set the pace in the half mile time trials for girls when she outskated the field by negotiating the distance in 1 minute, 25.2 seconds. The final half mile trials for girls will be featured tonight.

Hudlin Hurls, Nats Engage Tigers Today

Back From Dismal Trip, Griffs Are In Second Division

Today the Detroit Tigers start an invasion of Griffith Stadium by the West and Harris is turning to Willis Hudlin for some pitching help. The veteran of 14 campaigns with Cleveland won himself a place as a starting pitcher for the Nats with his 10-inning, 5-hit triumph over the Athletics a week ago.

Hudlin pitched and won that game despite a painful muscle injury in his leg, suffered when he slipped at home plate while starting to run out a hit at Chicago. Hudlin has been a refreshing addition to the Nats because of his control. In five starts this season he has walked only three batters.

Tigers Surprise Club

The Nats, who left Washington in fourth place for the ill-starred trip North, are now 2½ games removed from the first division, and hold sixth place by only a half-game margin over the Browns.

In the Tigers they will be meeting one of the surprise clubs in the league. The Red Sox and Indians have been commanding the leadership interest, but today finds the third-pace Tigers only 3½ games out of the lead as a result of their twin triumph over the Browns on Decoration Day.

The Detroit Cub, founded chiefly on power, has been getting some potent pitching from Buck Newsom (five wins, one defeat) and Tommy Bridges. Hank Greenberg and Rudy York have been producing runs in quantities. Detroit slugging and better than tolerable pitching have offset an uncertain infield defense.

The Nats will be operating with Jimmy Pofahl at shortstop and Buddy Lewis at third base throughout their home stand, it was indicated yesterday. The club physician reported that Cecil Travis, suffering from an ugly spike wound in his left leg, would scarcely be able to rejoin the line-up for two weeks.

Harris is not displeased with his batting order despite the attacking weakness displayed in the four-game Yankee series when the Nats totaled only four runs. The line-up produced 20 runs against the A's on Decoration Day and Zeke Bonura contributed his first homer of the season.

Contract Bridge

Did you say you'd like to be a bridge expert?

And another duty of the bridge expert is to listen to innumerable bridge hands, most of them vague and complicated, be asked how he would bid, play or lead, and then join in the laughter when he guesses wrong.

Here is a typical case. You are North, holding three cards:

♠Q73
◇Q
♣A109752

The bidding, with both sides vulnerable and South dealer, has gone like this:

South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	2♣	2♠
5♣	Pass	Pass	6♣
7♣	7♡	Pass	Pass
Pass

What do you lead? Make your decision before looking at the complete deal which follows:

North: ♠Q73 ♡862 ◇Q ♣A109752

West: ♠J10862 ♡KJ754 ◇J6 ♣3

East: ♠None ♡AQ1093 ♣Q ◇AK97 542

South: ♠AK954 ♡None ◇1083 ♣KJ864

The only lead which will stop the grand slam is the ace of clubs. But a number of good players guessed wrong. The best rationalization for leading the club ace goes like this: The bidding makes certain that East has control of both hearts and diamonds, therefore a diamond lead is out. This narrows the choice to a spade or a club; while the spade is the shorter suit and therefore is less likely to be void in East's hand, his bidding must again be considered. East of course might have an ace in one black suit and a void in the other, in which case the situation is hopeless, but if he should be bluffing in one of his cue bids, it is more likely to be the second than the first; therefore, lead the ace of clubs. Oh well, eenie, meenie, meinie, moe, isn't much better.

The listener who sends in the question "Fun in Print" contestants consider the best gets a more expensive prize than the winning contestant. Award for the best question is a set of sterling silver, while the contestant with the best record gets a smaller silver gift . . . Having established something of a record for broadcasting split infinitives, "Vox Pop's" Parks Johnson and Wally Butterworth are going after split atoms. "Try this one on, Winnie. I want to see how I look in it"

Orphans in Love

Marion White

Ellen Carlan has loved Peter Storm since both were children. They take refuge from a storm in the deserted old Tucker mansion and note the resemblance of Peter to Jonathan Tucker. As the result of a fire Peter is a hero and the papers connect him with the Tucker house. John Abbott and his wife, who manage the Tucker estate, fear their deception 25 years ago when they abandoned the only heir at the orphanage, will be discovered. Abbott offers Peter a job in his firm. Ellen is hurt when Peter says Millicent Abbott is beautiful, and Mother Ross at the orphanage helps by sending Ellen to Rosalind, a famous designer who hires her as a model. Peter takes Ellen dinner-dancing but her happiness is ended when Millicent monopolizes Peter. The Abbotts decide Peter and Millicent would be a good match. Ellen models a bridal gown at Rosalind's fall show, which Roger Maillard attends with his sister. The handsome millionaire sportsman falls in love with Ellen but she declines his invitations. Ellen accidentally gets her chance at dressmaking when a shop maid spills ink on a bridal gown the night before the Van Dorne wedding.

CHAPTER 24.

"IT'S NO MORE silly for me to want to take you to dinner than for you to want to make Iris Van Dorne's wedding dress."

She laughed at the comparison. "I don't want to make her dress especially. I just want to make dresses. Lovely, artistic creations like you see in the windows all along the street. It's a foolish little ambition, isn't it?"

"Not necessarily. Some men like to build automobiles, and some like to paint pictures."

"That's it. I want to make dresses. And it isn't easy. When Rosalind gave me a job, I thought I was set. But there's much more to it than that. It may be ten years before I really get to work. First I must baste seams, then I must sew on hooks and eyes . . . oh, there are a dozen tiresome jobs. Do you suppose the men who make automobiles have to spend weeks just pushing the thumb-tacks in the upholstery?"

"I daresay." His voice was very serious.

Important Order

"Then don't you see? Here's my chance. Tonight. This order for the Van Dorne wedding is the most important Rosalind has ever had. If there is no wedding dress tomorrow morning, her reputation is ruined. If there is one, a brand-new, perfect one, then my apprenticeship is served . . . Oh, please don't laugh at me!"

"I'm not laughing, my dear! Believe me, I'm not. If I'm smiling, it's only evidence of my delight to know that we have something in common."

"Don't tell me you make dresses too."

Now he did laugh, whole heartedly. "Some people think it's just as bad. My secret ambition, that is. You see, I have a ranch out in Wyoming. For ten years—at least ten years. I've been trying to win first prize at the State Fair for my cattle. That's silly, isn't it? You can laugh if you want to. Everybody does."

But she didn't. She just looked at him in amazement. "I don't think it's silly at all. Every good farmer wants to win first prize. That's his proof of achievement. But—for you . . . "

"For me to be a farmer is silly. That what you mean?"

"No, I don't. I like you much better now. Truly I do."

His eyes held hers, intently. "I want you to, Ellen," he said with deep meaning.

Sat Up

His words created a quick uncertainty within her. She sat up abruptly, changing the mood between them. She dropped her eyes to the food before her. "I'll never get back in an hour," she said jerkily, "if we sit her talking so much . . . "

Nevertheless, it was only a few minutes before 8 when they returned to the shop. Ellen handed him the key to the side entrance.

"I did enjoy the dinner," she told him. "I'm glad you persuaded me to go. But now you'll excuse me for leaving so abruptly?"

He opened the door, held it for her. "You're not leaving abruptly," he said "I'm coming in with you."

Shook Head

She shook her head. "Please don't. There's so much to be done. I'll work much faster if I'm alone."

"I won't disturb you, so don't worry. But I'm not going to leave you in this lonely warehouse all night. Look how dark and gloomy it is back there. And it's only 8 o'clock now. Think what it will be like at midnight."

"I'm not afraid. Not the least bit." But her voice was shaky.

"Besides, there might be mice." She shuddered now. There were mice. She knew it. If she spent the night here alone her fingers would tremble so by midnight that she wouldn't be able to take a stitch.

"I know what I'll do," he said brightly. "There's a book-shop across the street. I'll run over and pick up a couple of good mysteries. They're swell to read in old, deserted warehouses.

Comfortable Chair

"Then I'll take one of those comfortable chairs, not the gilt-edge crackerbox I sat on the other day—and set it up in the hallway outside the sewing room. You can close the door if you like, and you'll never know I'm there."

"I'd sooner leave the door open," she murmured in surrender. It would be nice to know that someone was in the building. Safer, too. There were several thousand dollars' worth of furs in Rosalind's vault.

He was as good as his word. While she ripped seams and cut new velvet, thankful that Rosalind had enough on hand for a dozen brides, he sat outside, half in the first dressing room and half in the corridor, on one of the ivory tufted divans from the salon, completely aborbed in his book.

One in a while they would call out to each other, carelessly and casually, but not interrupting either the sewing or the reading.

She wondered about him as she worked. He was unreal and unbelievable, a million-dollar prince playing night watchman to an amateur dressmaker.

The realization amazed her, each time she came round to it, so that she would look out suddenly to see if he was still there.

Feet Stuck

Still she could see his feet stuck out in the hallway, supported on one of the "gilt-edged cracker boxes" for a foot-stool. She felt the comfort of his presence, enjoyed the soft warmth of his cigarette smoke.

Why was he doing this for her?

The thought disturbed her, left her with a sense of sadness. In these few hours, they had come to understand each other so well, to like each other.

Would he feel the same tomorrow? Would he phone her every day, and send white roses? She didn't want that. She couldn't accept any further show of friendship. . . .

By 10 o'clock, she had the old dress ripped apart completely, and new velvet cut from each separate part, exactly and precisely, so that there would be no problem in fitting.

Worked Quickly

She worked quickly, surely and confidently, salvaging whatever sections of the old dress she could, to save precious hours. By 10:30 a new dress was basted together. She tried it on the dummy before she undertook to put in the final stitching by machine.

Except for the pucker of unpressed seams, the new dress was a perfect replica. She held her breath, triumphantly.

"What's going on now?" Roger called from the hallway.

"I've put it all together. Want to see it?"

He came in, glad of the chance to stretch his long legs. "Beautiful!" he approved. "Much too beautiful for Iris Van Dorne." He walked around the dummy, eyeing it curiously. "Wish I could put a perfect cow together as easily as that," he said with a grin.

It was a simple matter, to stitch up the seams on the machine, once everything was basted together. Even working slowly and cautiously, the job was done before 11 o'clock.
